Bomb Ban Veto

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today vetoed legislation to cut off funds for U.S. bombing of Cambodia, claiming it would "cripple or destroy" chances for a negotiated peace there and would be "a serious blow" to U.S. credibility around the world.

The House of Representatives sustained the veto.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield then retorted that Nixon would be responsible for the federal government grinding to a halt if he persists in the air war.

Nixon rejected a $3.3 billion supplemental appropriations bill containing a provision barring the use of appropriated funds for further military activity "in, over or from the shores of" Laos and Cambodia.

Congress would keep attaching the same amendment to every available bill, Mansfield vowed.

"If he doesn't want to stop the bombing, but wants to stop the government, it's up to him," Mansfield said.

The majority leader said he saw no way out of the constitutional crisis short of a decision by Nixon to end the air war.

Judging from anti-war votes recorded this week, the house does not have the two-thirds majority to override the president, although the Senate probably does.

Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said the legislation reached Nixon's desk Tuesday evening and the president decided upon his veto after conferring by telephone with Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Gerald Ford of Michigan, Republican leader of the House of Representatives.

The veto was decided upon shortly after the legislation cleared the Senate by a vote of 81 to 11.

A more serious test of wills between Congress and the president is expected to emerge this week, when Congress sends Nixon a resolution permitting government agencies to continue to draw appropriated funds after the current fiscal year closes Saturday.

Unless this resolution passes, government agencies will be without funds to operate.

The House already has voted to attach the amendment to this resolution and the Senate was expected to follow and send the measure to the president in a few days.

Vancouver Arson Fire Kills 3

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a three-alarm fire that destroyed three rooming houses in Vancouver's West End, killing at least three persons and sending four to hospital early today.

The fire began about 3:40 a.m. on a porch at 1157 Nelson and spread rapidly to 1165 and 1155 Nelson, a cluster of old houses in the city's high-rise apartment district.

A police arson investigator said one of the first firemen on the scene reported smelling gasoline and oil near the porch, where it is believed the fire started in a couch.

Firemen later recovered the bodies of a man and woman from upstairs rooms at 1155 Nelson. They have not been identified.

After a city bulldozer arrived to dig through the rubble of 1157, which was completely demolished, the body of another man was found. A man unaccounted for in 1157 earlier had been identified as Richard Brandson, 37.

One of the first residents out of 1157, who refused to give his name, said he saw a man running down the street as the fire flared up on the porch.

The resident yelled to wake other occupants and then ran onto the street where he flagged down cab driver Bob Wood.

"There was a man on the lawn by this time with burns," said Wood. "We carried him across the street. He wanted to go back in until he found out his wife was out."

Wood said that in five minutes all three of the three-storey houses "were going to beat hell."

Each of the buildings housed 12 to 15 people.

Police evacuated more than 100 other people from nearby rooming houses and apartment buildings at the height of the blaze.

Those in hospital were identified as: Frank McLaughlin, 49, in fair condition with cuts and burns; Vivian Foster, 65, fair with burns; and John Thompson, 27, in good condition with cuts and burns.

Herbert Dayton, 52, of 1157 Nelson, was released after treatment for burns.

At least 90 firemen, with 11 pieces of equipment tackled the blaze, which was still smouldering three hours later.

One of the first policemen on the scene was Constable K. D. Doern and his partner, who arrived to hear a woman screaming from an upstairs window in one of the houses.

Const. Doern said a neighbor he identified as Les Stork, ran to a fire truck which had just arrived and pulled a ladder off.

"We put it up but it wasn't long enough to reach," said Constable Doern. "So this guy pushed it flat against the wall and held it there with his body while my partner and I climbed up.

"The woman wouldn't jump. She was standing there holding a cat and she wouldn't drop it. Finally she put it down and we got her through the window.

"It was terrible. Her clothes were on fire and her flesh . . . she slipped out of our grasp and fell, but she was okay."

During this time, Doern said, another citizen tried climbing up a drain pipe to get at the woman, but he fell back unable to reach her.

SPENDING BILL PASSES

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government won final approval Tuesday for its $18.4 billion spending program in spite of a series of last-minute Conservative attempts to upset the applecart.

The program, the largest ever by a federal government, emerged unscathed from the Commons shortly before midnight when the traditional bill to endorse government spending plans was given third reading.

The vote ended a day-long Conservative attack on controversial appropriations in the over-all package.

By law, Tuesday was the final opportunity for MPs to complain about the spending estimates. All remaining votes to approve or reject the estimates had to be taken at the end of the day.

The final motion was approved with formal Conservative opposition.

When the bill was introduced, the Conservatives registered token opposition at nearly all stages.

It went through first and second readings on voice votes but the Conservatives forced a total of six recorded votes during clause-by-clause study in committee-of-the-whole.

The margins ranged from 126 to 1 on the first clause to 205 to 4 on committee approval of the bill in total.

B.C. Government Buys 3 Sawmills

In its third venture into the forest industry, the provincial government has bought controlling interest in three sawmills in Vanderhoof.

The purchase of Plateau Mills Ltd. for $7.65 million was announced in a statement Tuesday by Lands and Forests Minister Bob Williams, who last fall vetoed a bid by Rayonnier Canada Ltd. to buy the mills.

Williams said the government bought out the company to ensure Canadian ownership (Rayonnier is American owned), to protect the Mennonite families who set up the company in 1944 and to provide an experimental study operation for the B.C. Forest Service.

"It should be noted that Plateau has been and is a profitable operation and has excellent prospects for the future," the statement said. "The return on investment is expected to be most attractive."

The province has bought "over 90 per cent" of the shares in Plateau, Williams said, and they will be held by B.C. Cellulose Co., the Crown company which also holds the province's shares in Columbia Cellulose Ltd., purchased last April.

Plateau President William Martens was not available for comment today.

The minister said there will be little change in the operation of the company which employs 280 men in the mills and 100 men as contract loggers, and produces about 120 million board feet annually.

Plateau will, however, expand its activities into the Chilko Forest an uncommitted timber area where mill crews along with the B.C. Forest Service will do experimental studies on logging methods, environment problems and cost analysis.

To allow for this program, Prince George district forester Bill Young has been appointed a director of Plateau Mills.

Young's appointment and the Plateau-Chilko program are important Williams said because the forest service has often been unable to develop practical regulations and guidelines for the logging industry because of its limited involvement in actual logging operations.

Martens and George Froese, superintendent of operations at the mills, will continue with the company as directors.

Plateau's accountant Mark Thibodeau will also join the board and a representative of B.C. Cellulose will be appointed later.

GAS FIRM HALTS PRODUCTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., the second largest producer of natural gas in British Columbia, is curtailing its activities in the province until the investment climate improves, the company told the B.C. Energy commission Tuesday.

Henry Boswell, Amoco's vice-president of production and designated to become president in July, told the commission the cutbacks started "particularly since the (provincial) government's announcement of its unreasonable increase in oil royalties."

Cover-Up Only Choice: Dean

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — John Dean testified today that the White House staff felt there simply was "no alternative" but to try to hush up the Watergate bugging, although nobody liked the idea very much.

Returning for a third day at the nationally televised senate hearings on the scandal, Dean said the cover-up began immediately after five men — including a member of President Nixon's campaign staff — were arrested while planting bugs and photographing documents at the Democratic national committee June 17, 1972.

"Who set the policy on the cover-up?" asked Sen. Edward Gurney (Rep.—Fla).

"I don't think the policy was set," Dean replied. "There just was no alternative at that time."

Dean, fired April 30 as White House counsel, conceded again that he never tried to warn the president what the White House staff and campaign officials were doing.

"You must have realized this cover-up business was pretty serious," Gurney said.

"I didn't like it from the outset," Dean replied. "I don't think anybody liked it."

As Gurney pressed for an explanation about why Dean did not talk to the president himself, Dean said he "didn't have access" to Nixon directly but reported to Nixon's two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

"I assumed that what I was reporting to Haldeman and Ehrlichman was being reported to the president," Dean said.

Dean offered to take a lie detector test as he stuck to his televised testimony that the president and his top aides collaborated in the cover-up plot.

He added some new accusations, saying the White House used the FBI and Internal Revenue Service to investigate persons named on an "enemies list." And he said the secret service once spied on Senator George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate.

Officials of the Senate committee said Dean would be asked today a series of questions submitted by Leonard Garment, who replaced Dean as White House counsel. Dean was fired April 30.

"It would appear they would like to prove that Mr. Dean was the brains of it all, and that he gave bad advice," said Senator Daniel Inoye (Dem.—Hawaii).

Hanging Ban Debate Rages

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Commons committee failed to decide Tuesday whether to accept or reject a move by the minority Liberal government to abolish the death penalty in Canada.

Members representing all parties spent nearly two hours arguing whether government-sponsored amendments to the capital punishment bill now before Parliament are in order or not.

The two amendments introduced by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand would totally abolish capital punishment but provide for a minimum of 10 years before parole.

A judge, at his discretion, could extend the minimum term to 20 years.

Allmand introduced the amendments at the committee meeting Tuesday through Liberal MP Rod Baker.

Committee Chairman James Jerome will consider the amendments and rule as to their admissibility for debate in the committee Thursday morning.

Earlier in the day Jerome said in an interview that he believed the amendments were out of order.

But, after Tuesday's arguments, he would only state that he has "a completely open mind on the question."

MPs favoring the retention of the death penalty argued that the solicitor-general's proposals were out of order since they violated the principle of the capital punishment bill — already approved in a free vote in the Commons — to extend for another five years abolition of capital punishment for all crimes except the murder of police and prison guards.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Calgary North), a retentionist, accused Allmand of "playing games" by informally proposing his amendments last week.

In the Commons, former prime minister John Diefenbaker first was booed, then interrupted by a back-bench Progressive Conservative colleague as he questioned the government Tuesday on its proposed total ban on capital punishment.

"I've listened enough to the destructive arguments of the honorable member for Prince Albert," said Peter Reilly (PC — Ottawa West).

"I will sit here and yell 'boo' every time he opens his mouth."

Cannery Warning

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis warned Tuesday that if the Japanese take over Cassiar Cannery near Prince Rupert they'll find that their fishboats are no more valuable than second-hand taxis.

Davis announced that he will lower the licence classification of Cassiar fishboats to a 10-year working limit rather than allow foreign nationals to acquire exclusive fishing rights in Canadian waters through the back door.

"There is no way in which foreign nationals are going to get control over the right to fish in Canadian waters," the minister declared, noting that only Canadian citizens can hold valid fishing licences.

The minister reported that Cassiar Cannery has about 100 fishboats on the West Coast, about two per cent of the total number of boats operating there. Even if the company were sold, he explained, only Canadian fishermen could man Cassiar's boats.

"But what we are concerned with here is basic policy," Davis said. "We can see as we become more successful in enlarging our exclusive fishing zones a number of foreign nations are going to try to come in through the back door by buying up Canadian companies."

Conversion Halted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver city council voted 7-4 Tuesday to declare a one-year moratorium on conversion of existing apartments to condominium units that then are offered for sale to tenants.

Mayor Art Phillips and Aldermen Geoff Massey, Fritz Bowers and Mike Harcourt voted against the moratorium, which was approved moments after council had approved stringent regulations for conversions.

These included requirements that 75 per cent of tenants had to approve conversions and that owners had to permit continued renting in hardship cases.

PENSIONERS' MAIL FIRST AT VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Old age pension cheques were given top priority after Vancouver's wildcat post office strikers returned to their jobs in the main post office Tuesday afternoon to sort out today's first deliveries.

"There are thousands of pension cheques in here," David Stutters, of the post office public affairs department, said Tuesday night.

A postal official said earlier Tuesday there were 60,000 pension cheques ready for distribution.

Stutters said the post office might schedule overtime work and take on casual help if necessary to move the piled up mail through into Vancouver homes and business places.

Stutters said after dealing with the pension cheques priority for the other mail would likely be handled in the sequence in which it arrived in the area's postal stations.

QUEEN URGES ETHNIC UNITY

TORONTO (CP) — Queen Elizabeth urged Canadians of all ethnic origins Tuesday to accept her as their monarch and the Crown as a symbol of "national sovereignty belonging to all."

"It is as Queen of Canada that I am here," she told 1,400 prominent Ontarians at a lavish provincial dinner after a heavy day of appearances throughout the hot, muggy provincial capital. It was the second in a 10-day four-province tour.

"I would like the Crown to be seen as a symbol of national sovereignty belonging to all. It is not only a link between Commonwealth nations, but between Canadian citizens of every national origin and ancestry."

One of the longest ovations came after the Queen said:

"The Crown is an idea more than a person and I would like the Crown in Canada to represent everything that is best and most admired in the Canadian ideal.

"I will continue to do my best to make it so during my lifetime and I hope you will continue to give me your help in this task."

The Queen stood, unsmiling, during the long ovation but when she resumed there seemed to be a note of emotion in her voice.

In a brief passage spoken in French, the 47-year-old monarch drew applause when she said that minorities re-discovering their roots in all countries had created conflicts.

"But Canada can be admired for its respect for individual Canadians which raises cultural identity above political debate and makes it a right.

"The only thing it demands is that all have an opportunity to master one or two of the official languages."

The Queen's address provided fitting counterpoint to a program of singing and dancing by 1,500 people of 40 different cultural backgrounds hours before on the football field of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Tons of Knots Discharged Daily by Mill

Raynier's pulp mill at Port Alice discharges about 10 tons of wood knots a day into Neurotsos Inlet, the Pollution Control Board was told today.

But the mill on northern Vancouver Island will introduce a screening operation later this year which will salvage the knots for processing at another mill, manager Ralph James said.

The process used at the Port Alice mill cannot digest the knots. At kraft pulp mills, knots are utilized with the rest of the wood.

James was testifying at the second day of a hearing before the board at the Victoria Law Courts. Rayonier is appealing pollution control standards for the Port Alice mill recently set by William Venables, the province's director of pollution control.

Venables had ordered the mill to immediately meet higher water standards in the inlet where effluent is discharged.

He has also instructed the company to add a recovery system by the end of 1975. Rayonier said Tuesday it would do so — at a cost of $32.5 million — but it would need six to nine months more time.

The company is also arguing for postponement of the water quality standards until the addition is in. It also claims stiffer control standards that Venables has set for 1978 are not necessary.

Louis Lindholm counsel for Venables, quoted today a 1970 inquiry which said the demands on oxygen in the inlet's water made by the mill's effluent are equivalent to the demands which would be made by sewage from a city of 3.5 million.

The basic question raised by Rayonier's witnesses Tuesday is: how relevant is the economic importance of the Port Alice mill to the problem of controlling its pollution?

Lindholm said Venables could not have regard for the economic and social aspects in enforcing the Pollution Control Act.

But Charles Locke, counsel for Rayonier, said setting controls for the mill could not be considered in the abstract.

"How you are able to divorce pollution control from social and economic factors escapes me."

Lindholm replied that pollution control legislation says, in effect, there comes a time when economic aspects must give way to environmental aspects and at the Port Alice mill, that time has arrived.

The board recognizes there is a "gray area" said chairman Valter Raudsepp, ruling that the board would hear Rayonier's evidence on economic impact. But more than once during the afternoon he suggested to Locke that Rayonier try to keep testimony closer to the issue.

Among witnesses called by the company were businessmen, the doctor at Port Alice, a geographer and an economist.

Dr. D. L. Morris said he regularly swims in the chilly Neuroutsos Inlet, where the mill is located, although he doesn't know anyone else who does.

While the mill discharge discolors the water through about eight miles in the inlet and winds produce foamy patches, Morris said marine life is abundant and fish can be caught near the mill outfall two miles from the top of the inlet.

Many salmon moved up the inlet last August and he has seen numerous fingerlings around the wharf in the past month. He knows of no one who has been made ill by eating the fish, he said.

Dr. E. M. W. Gibson of West Vancouver, a geography professor at Simon Fraser University, and F. L. C. Reed, a consulting economist from Vancouver, were both called by Rayonier to testify on the economic importance of the mill to the north island.

Reed said his study of the question suggests each job at the mill generates two more jobs elsewhere.

Raudsepp noted that neither Gibson nor Reed had been asked by Rayonier to examine the hidden social costs which follow a change in environmental factors.

The hearing adjourns later today until Friday and if not concluded then will continue next Wednesday.

The ICCS team was approaching Song Dinh, 100 miles east of Saigon, when preceding South Vietnamese troops ran into a Viet Cong band Tuesday.

None of the ICCS members was injured as the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong exchanged gunfire. One mortar shell landed about 200 feet from the ICCS team.

The two Canadians were identified here as Capt. Alex Miller of Montreal and Capt. A. R. Robertson of Grande Prairie, Alta.

The South Vietnamese government today before it was announced that Nixon had vetoed the appropriations bill said it would consider military support to the Cambodian government if a bombing halt creates a situation threatening South Vietnam's security.

Nude Clubs Seen Target Of Crackdown

Liquor Control Board crackdown requiring that a three-piece orchestra accompany cabaret entertainment at all times has raised the ire of at least one cabaret entrepenuer.

Bob Reeds, a shareholder of The Barn Ltd., Vancouver, trekked over to Victoria this morning armed with a protest placard and an open letter to complain about the ruling.

He said it was an attempt to shaft nude clubs. "My protest is based on the attempt by the board to get rid of nude dancing by pricing it out of existence," he said.

The Barn, he explained, offered an artistic nude show. "There's no bumps and grinds. Our girls (directed by a nude MC) simply walk out on stage, take their clothes off and dance."

Besides the added cost of continuous orchestral accompaniment, Reeds finds fault with the ruling because it will destroy the atmosphere of the show. "Men that come in for lunch want soothing music," he said, "not an orchestra."

The ruling by LCB executive assistant V. C. Woodland said all cabaret owners would receive regulations, to be implemented whether cabaret entertainment was a nude dancer, ventriloquist, poet or mimic, Reeds said.

Previously the practice at most cabarets, according to Canadian Restaurant Association chairman Don Bellamy, has been to use live orchestras intermittently during hours of operation.

He said a three-piece orchestra costs a minimum of $30 an hour and owners couldn't afford the extra $270 a day to comply with the directive.

Reeds said he is the only cabaret owner to stage a protest, although others in the group of 120 owners on the Lower Mainland are staging "secret indignation meetings."

"It's a matter of principal. Because of the ruling we've had to add $1 to all luncheon prices."

Reeds said inspectors visited The Barn Monday and told management to conform to the orchestral regulations by Tuesday. "But I was given no written confirmation of the ruling."

Cabarets are granted dining lounge licences by the board and allowed to operate until 2 a.m.

Gun Wound Victim Flown To Hospital

A Comox man with a bullet in the left side of his chest was flown to Royal Jubilee Hospital early this morning for emergency surgery.

Courtenay RCMP said Cecil Grose was alone in his home at 1:45 a.m. today when the accident occurred.

The man was first taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Comox, but was then taken by a Rescue Co-ordination Centre mercy flight to Victoria at 5 a.m.

RCMP said no further details are available as they have not yet talked to Grose.

In another mercy flight today, a rescue helicopter delivered three pints of blood to the passenger-freighter Oriental Carnival 100 miles off the Vancouver Island west coast.

The ship's doctor radioed ashore that a passenger bleeding internally could not safely be moved because of loss of blood.

Demand for Forest Products Keeps B.C. Economy Growing

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

British Columbia's economy continued its strong growth pattern throughout the first quarter of this year, according to statistics released today by Gary Lauk, minister of industrial development, trade and commerce.

Paced by a continuing demand for forest products, factory shipments totalled $1,356.4 million in the first quarter, an increase of 23.7 per cent over the first quarter of 1972.

March shipments totalled $492.1 million, up from $411 million last March. In February the shipments were worth $443.8 million, up from $357.5 million and in January $420.5 million, up from $330 million.

Manufacture of lumber was up 11.5 per cent, pulp production was ahead 13.5 per cent and paper production up 7.5 per cent.

Most of the forestry production is exported.

The value of exports through B.C. ports was up 24.1 per cent in the first quarter while imports were 18 per cent higher.

Coal and copper production were also up sharply during the first quarter.

In the first three months, B.C. produced 1.9 million tons of coal, up 47.1 per cent over the same period in 1972.

Meanwhile, copper shipments were up 98.6 per cent to 88 million pounds, although statistics have only been obtained for the first two months of the year.

Building permits in British Columbia in the first quarter totalled $238.2 million, up 27 per cent. Housing starts were down 18.9 per cent at 4,005 but completions were up 19.3 per cent at 6,495.

Units still under construction at the end of March totalled 17,292, up from 16,247 units at the end of March, 1972.

Building permits reflect the value of all construction started in organized areas except for pipelines, hydro-electric developments and highways.

In the first quarter, the value of Vancouver Island building permits was $40.2 million, up 15.1 per cent over the first quarter of 1972.

Building permits on the lower mainland including Vancouver totalled $148.7 million, up 29.4 per cent.

Other areas of growth included Okanagan, $20.4 million, up 35.5 per cent; southern interior, $11.7 million, up 23.7 per cent, and the central interior, $9.7 million, up 49.2 per cent.

Declines were experienced in the east Kootenays at $1.8 million, down 10.6 per cent, and west Kootenays at $1.7 million, down 6.1 per cent.

Retail sales were up 15.5 per cent in the first quarter while bank debits rose 22.1 per cent and gasoline consumption increased 10 per cent.

. . . WATERGATE

At Tuesday's session, Senator Joseph Montoya (Dem.—N. Mex.) asked Dean if Nixon told the truth April 17 when he said "I condemn any attempts to cover up in this case, no matter who is involved."

"No, sir," Dean said. "By that time he knew the full implications of the case."

Dean reiterated that Nixon knew a cover-up was going on as early as last Sept. 15. Dean said that on March 21 he told Nixon specifically that Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Dean himself could be indicted for obstruction of justice because of the cover-up. This was more than three weeks before Nixon's April 17 remark.

White House spokesmen repeated Tuesday that the president stands behind earlier statements denying knowledge or complicity in the Watergate affair. The White House had announced it would have no comment this week on Dean's testimony.

Dean told the Watergate committee today that a White House list of political "enemies" included journalists, businessmen and at least one labor leader, The Washington Star-News, meanwhile, reported that the list also included at least nine U.S. senators, two house members and several entertainers and educators.

Mentioned by the Star-News in document Dean turned over to the committee were Harold J. Gibbons, a vice-president of the Teamsters union regarding "discrepancies" in an income tax return he filed; Robert Strauss, then Democratic party treasurer and now national chairman; television newsmen Chat Huntley and Daniel Schorr; actress Jane Fonda and actors Paul Newman and Gregory Peck; Harvard economist J. Kenneth Galbraith, and Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a former advisor to President John F. Kennedy.

Democratic senators included George McGovern, Edward Kennedy, J. William Fullbright and Edmund Muskie while former Alabama governor George Wallace and New York mayor John Lindsay were also named in the Star-News report.

Meanwhile, Frederick C. LaRue, a top Nixon campaign official, unexpectedly pleaded guilty today to conspiring to obstruct justice in the Watergate case and declared his willingness to be a government witness against others indicted in the future.

LaRue, assistant to former attorney-general John Mitchell on the committee for the re-election of the president, acknowledged helping concoct false stories to mislead investigators and of channeling more than $300,000 to buy the silence of seven men convicted in the break-in at Democratic national headquarters.

LaRue waived formal indictment by a grand jury and entered his guilty plea.

CREDIT DATA CURBS SET

Legislation to curb the information-gathering techniques of insurance and credit companies will be introduced later this year, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Companies should be prevented from gaining information on creditors through conversations with neighbors and friends, the minister said, and files on individuals kept by companies should be open to persons involved.

Electronic snooping should be prohibited, he said, except where authorized by the attorney-general and a judge.

Measures to enforce these tougher regulations will come through changes to the B.C. Privacy Act, but Macdonald said he will wait to see the contents of the federal Protection of Privacy Act, now before the Commons, before introducing any provincial legislation.

Strachan Mum On E&N Plan

Transportation Minister Robert Strachan said Tuesday the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway must remain part of the Vancouver Island transportation system.

But the minister would not say whether the provincial government would consider taking over the railway.

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife announced earlier this month he would urge the provincial government to take over the E and N and add it to the B.C. Railway.

Quaife's statement came after an announcement that Canadian Pacific Railway had applied to close stations in Parksville, Nanaimo and Chemainus.

Strachan said he hadn't met Quaife or any of the other Island mayors who were protesting the possible closures and no meetings were planned as yet.

"We're certainly going to take a look into the part the E and N must play in communications on Vancouver Island," Strachan said, adding that the decision to permit the closures is under federal control through the board of transport commission.

The railway will be used more extensively in the future, the minister said, because of the rising population on the Island and the increase in the cost of operating automobiles.

Strachan, who just returned from a month-long trip to Ottawa and London, said he didn't know what specific action would be taken concerning the railway but added "the whole operation requires a good examination."

$6M SCHEME GOING TO VOTERS

A new capital works program worth about $6 million will be put to Saanich voters in November.

A closed meeting of council Tuesday reportedly agreed on the general figure but no specifics.

A municipal official said no approximate figure charged to the average ratepayer on such a program could be named. Further details would be available as the program developed, he said.

Expenditures considered likely are recreation facilities for Burnside-Acorn school, a second ice surface and improvements on Colquitz and Swan creeks. A six-year program ended this year which financed an arena, swimming pool, community centres and water works.

NEW RAPE TRIAL ORDERED

The B.C. Court of Appeals has ordered a new trial for a Colwood man charged in connection with the rape of a registered nurse.

George Jerome Makow, 22, was convicted Jan. 17 and had been serving an 18-month sentence at the Lower Mainland Correctional Centre in New Haven since being sentenced in Victoria by Mr. Justice William McIntyre.

The appeals Court sitting in Vancouver allowed Makow's appeal by a two-to-one decision.

The court ordered a new B.C. Supreme Court trial, which Makow's lawyer, Harold Turnham, said today will probably be held in the fall.

Turnham is going to Vancouver Thursday to apply for Makow's release from prison pending the new trial.

The appeal court's ruling was based on the fact that "the trial judge had improperly interfered with the cross-examination of the complainant as to conversations alleged to have taken place during intercourse," said Turnham.

Makow had been convicted by a jury of three women and nine men of raping the Saanich woman in the wooded Highland district Nov. 17.

The jury had recommended leniency.

New Sweep In Comox

COURTENAY — The Comox Valley Exhibition Grounds, where two live mortar bombs have been found in the last two months, will be swept for more explosives by about 40 army engineers starting July 4.

A survey crew from Edmonton, Alta., airborne division checked the 100-acre site Tuesday.

The grounds were closed off last week following discovery of the second live bomb by a plowman. An earlier bomb was considered a freak discovery.

Sewing Program For Foster, Single Parents

A program of sewing instruction for foster and single parents will be offered for five Tuesday nights at Central Junior Secondary School starting July 10.

Sewing instructor Olive Minnings will show parents how to sew for their children, while Russ Steel amuses children over six years old by teaching handicrafts and games.

The two-hour programs start at 7:30 p.m. and parents with children under six may get financial assistance to help pay babysitters by phoning Bernice Packford at Family and Children's Service.

The service, along with the Foster Parents Association and Parents Without Partners, is sponsoring the program.

$8,000 Pay Hike For Passmore

A. J. Longmore will get an $8,000 raise July 1 when he ceases to be a civil servant and becomes an employee of the Greater Victoria School Board.

Longmore will be paid $33,000 a year by the board as its first superintendent of schools.

He is paid $24,678 as district superintendent, a job involving the same duties as his new one.

This salary has been paid by the provincial education department, along with an administrative allowance paid by the board.

The pay hike is "recognition of a grossly unfair situation," school board chairman Peter Bunn said today.

Greater Victoria's district superintendent and those in four other districts have been underpaid for years, said Bunn.

The school trustees have wanted to make superintendents in these five districts school board employees and give them better salaries, but the Social Credit government always refused, he said.

"They will never catch up what they have already lost" in salary increases, said Bunn.

"Longmore is not a money-grubbing individual at all," he said, and added that the board's decision on Longmore's new salary was unanimous.

"We have a very high opinion and respect for this guy."

CHANGE OF DIAPERS FOR HITCHHIKERS?

Three Duncan youths joined the throngs of hitchhikers near Victoria Tuesday afternoon, but they were no ordinary hitchhikers—the oldest was only eight.

The boys were picked up by Saanich police on the Trans-Canada Highway near Burnside Road at 1:45 p.m. and said they were on their way to visit friends.

"All we can do with kids this young is try to get hold of their parents and ask them to come down and pick them up," a police spokesman said.

"We get this kind of thing quite a lot when it's nice out and school is almost over."

Blanshard Link Viewed As Threat to Library

The long-delayed extension of Blanshard Street will improve traffic flow but it could also upset the work of the Saanich-Victoria branch library.

Donald Miller, director of the Greater Victoria Lobrary, told a library board meeting Tuesday that one possible route along Seymour Ave. to the Patricia Pay Highway would cut close enough to "hinder the operation of the library."

Problems of access from a four-lane highway and noise levels of traffic "would nake it virtually impossible to operate in my estimation," Miller said.

He read a letter from Highways Minister Graham Lea which said he was not able to give any information on the route but would let the board know as soon as possible.

"They're looking for the cheapest route," Miller said. "I understand another possible route would bring traffic within a few feet of Saanich municipal hall."

The extension joining Blanshard to Pat Bay Highway continues to be discussed privately by Saanich and the highways department.

Drainage problems at the branch library also figured in the director's monthly report.

Miller said no work has started to correct the drainage problem at the library nor have there been any repairs to the damaged floor tiles and walls in the auditorium area.

The area still has an unpleasant musty odor, he said, and is unusable for meetings and most programs.

Miller said the drainage problem was caused by a sewer line and surface drainage and Saanich municipality, which owns the building, is expected to make it right.

The board moved to send a strong letter to Saanich asking to have the situation remedied.

Oak Bay Firms Up a Principle

Oak Bay Council's decision to zone property from Willows Beach to Uplands Park between the Esplanade and Beach Drive in a manner to exclude future development of apartments and condominiums is of immediate concern to residents of the area and those using the beach. The majority of the residents at a public hearing on the issue were firmly opposed to the construction of the multiple dwelling units. The council unanimously endorsed their views on the vote.

But the issue has broader implications than those applying to the vicinity of the beach and park. It sets out a simple principle in speculation.

Legal representatives of those projecting development argued that their clients faced financial loss by zoning revision to permit single family homes only in the area. One group of brothers, inheriting property from their father who had purchased it as an investment, reportedly had been offered $160,000 for the land if it could be an apartment site, only $100,000 if it were reserved for single family homes.

The point was neatly met by a Willows Beach Association member who suggested that the individual might engage in many speculations during his lifetime. Some could yield handsome profits. Some could result in almost total loss. That, she argued, was the risk of speculation.

Two aldermen lent a sympathetic ear to pleas for compensation for developers who had made out of pocket expenditures for such things as architects' fees and plans while apartment zoning still covered the particular area. The issue merits thought.

It is nevertheless significant that a number of residents recognized the possibility of making more money out of sale of their property for apartments than to potential single-occupancy purchasers. They were willing to forgo that prospective cash advantage to restore their neighborhood to a single-family district. In any event, it was pointed out, property values have risen in the locality as desirable home sites have become scarcer.

Developers, of course, are entitled to make as much as they can legally. They must expect those who disagree with their plans — and who feel they would be injured through loss of amenities because of developments — to defend themselves. This they apparently have done in a portion of Oak Bay and the municipality's council has endorsed their stand. The win-lose equation in speculation — as well as investment — has been re-affirmed even when the apartment planners seemed to be on solid ground on the basis of previous zoning.

A friendly shore and a quiet sea — By Bill Halkett

Whistling on the Wind

British Columbia's so-called Majority Movement has roared out of the hinterland crusading to rid the province of its New Democratic Party government at the next election. It's too easy to sigh and say, "that's politics." The new movement, which aims at creating a non-socialist coalition to defeat the NDP, is a danger to the party system in British Columbia. Speaking here last Wednesday, Vancouver lawyer John McDonald said the party will support any candidates who are in favor of unifying the free enterprise parties. Judging from the reaction of B.C.'s three opposition leaders the new movement will be whistling on the wind come the next provincial election.

As Liberal Leader David Anderson said, political competition among the three private enterprise parties will eventually sort itself out and the NDP will be defeated. Governments come and go, but the party system has served B.C. quite well for more than 70 years. By attempting to polarize British Columbians into left and right extremes the Majority Movement arbitrarily narrows the voter's choice. British Columbians are an individual lot. They need all the choice they can get at the polls. And a quasi-political party that has no political philosophy is bound to disappear into the mountains from whence it came.

Ministerial Fish Story

Provincial Highways Minister Graham Lea and Minister Without Portfolio Frank Calder have egg on their faces over the Cassiar Packing Company caper. Last week the ministers said Japanese interests had purchased a majority interest in the Prince Rupert Company. They dashed off a telegram to Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis asking that he intervene to stop the sale, or retroactively kill the transaction if it had already been completed. Such ambiguous information about the state of the transaction should have warned us that the ministers were not in possession of all the facts.

The concerned ministers even said the province would buy the plant in order to preserve 100 commercial fishing licenses it held, "whatever the price." The balloon burst next day when a company spokesman said the Japanese had purchased only a minority interest to gain a favored position in Cassiar's salmon and herring egg production. — not the 75 per cent interest alleged by the ministers. Ministers of the Crown are to be commended for trying to protect our resources but they should check the facts before levelling such serious charges.

ROB BULL

Blaming Grits for the Rain

QUEBEC CITY — Strolling down St. Louis St. with Quebec Creditiste leader Yvon Dupuis recently on a sunny afternoon was rather like participating in a minor royal pageant until someone asked him about the weather.

People would recognize him and come over to shake his hand. Workmen trying to fix the pavement before the tourist hordes arrived to clog the streets would wave at him.

Mr. Dupuis was explaining that Quebecers were turning away from the Liberal government because they no longer sensed they could control political institutions. It was time, he said, for a return to the old values.

"We Creditistes are no longer only a rural party," he was saying. "Sophisticated, urban voters are beginning to see us as a viable alternative."

What About Weather?

At this point a middle-aged, simply-dressed man came up to Mr. Dupuis and asked him what he thought about all the rain Quebec has been experiencing.

"Well now sir," Mr. Dupuis said, "I've really looked into that file pretty thoroughly and frankly I don't see anything much . . ."

"Do you know how much rain we've been having recently?" the man asked. "Do you know how few full days of sun there have been in eastern Quebec this spring?"

When Mr. Dupuis gave a polite but general reply, the man started to outline a Liberal plot on the part of federal and provincial governments.

The plot it seems is to keep the rain falling on forested areas to help big pulp and paper companies while leaving the small farmers to suffer.

"Well I really don't see . . ." Mr. Dupuis was saying while the man continued.

Muttering something about an important meetin, the politician hurried away to a news conference where the first French translation ever of Major C. H. Douglas' theoretical work on Social Credit was to be unveiled.

But if Mr. Dupuis does not want to do something about the weather, some Creditistes do. Gabriel Dumont, Creditiste member of the national assembly for Megantic, a poor and rural riding in southeastern Quebec, has even charged that Canadian Forces and USAF aircraft are involved.

YVON DUPUIS
. . . no sophisticated reply

And there has also been the theory that Hydro Quebec has been encouraging a heavy rainfall to build up a backlog of water behind their dams.

Mr. Dumont has urged Quebec to take the question to the United Nations. He argues that this would be one way of finding compensation for farmers who lost $1 billion last year because of bad harvests blamed on rain.

The government has denied that any permits have been issued for cloud-seeding or that it is participating in any rain-making ventures itself or that there is evidence anyone else is involved in rain-making.

It has also pointed out that neighboring areas of the United States are suffering from a high rainfall this year.

The rain, says the government, is strictly a natural phenomenon over which Quebec has no control.

But the farmers are suffering and a large proportion of them are reported to have been able to complete only half their seeding this year.

Farmers Discouraged

Between April and September last year there were 23.3 inches of rainfall, up from 14.22 in the same period in 1971. Since this April, the rainfall has already reached 11.35 inches.

Jean-Marc Kirouac of the Agricultural Producers Union said recently that most farmers were discouraged with last year's rains and may not be able to cope this year.

Many farmers, upset with the general economic decline of rural areas, the substitution of huge regional schools for smaller and closer local ones, and government emphasis on industrial expansion, already feel politicians have not been very concerned about them.

Some of these vote Creditiste. A few feel the government is responsible for all their problems, including the rain.

JAMES RESTON

More to Gain by Co-Operating

WASHINGTON — The Nixon-Brezhnev agreements on the limitation of strategic offensive arms and the joint development of peaceful atomic energy promise a great deal more than they deliver, but at least they maintain the spirit of co-operation.

Even if there is less in these documents than meets the eye, they are letters of intent. They are saying that the two most powerful nations in the world believe they have more to gain by co-operating with one another than by fighting one another, and that even limited agreements in the fields of arms control, atomic energy development, trade and culture may eventually lead to a more dependable world order.

No world order can be established without getting rid of the mistrust that poisoned the relations between Washington and Moscow in the first generation after World War II, and this is the main thing that is going on now. They are building confidence rather than trading gas for wheat.

Moscow Gains

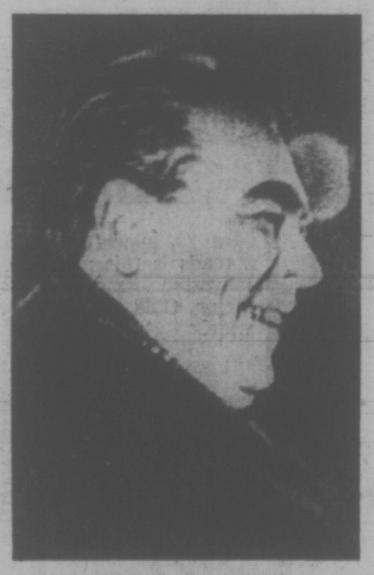
If you look at the Soviet Union's economic and political arrangements with the non-Communist states over the last few years, it is easy to argue that Moscow had gained more than it has given. The present basis for negotiation rests on assumptions highly favorable to the U.S.S.R.

The Soviets have negotiated formal acceptance by the West of the wartime boundaries, which is a polite way of saying that the West has accepted the division of Germany, and the establishment of a Soviet sphere of influence in Eastern Europe, now occupied by Soviet troops.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union is getting from her former cold war adversaries the grain and modern technology her own system has not been able to provide. This still troubles a lot of people in the U.S. who would have preferred to see the Communists crippled by the consequences of their own failures and who ask, what they get out of all this?

The short answer in the short run is not much. Moscow wants credits now for the development of gas and other raw materials which will not be available for years to come. Her benefits are tangible and immediate, America's on the whole are intangible and remote, and yet there is something to be said for the Administration's patient efforts to bring both the Soviet Union and China into closer contact with the changing and interdependent modern world.

If both sides come to believe that they do not have to live in fear of destruction by the other, it may be possible to get the arms race under control. It will be a very slow business, but the nations of the world are now spending over $220 billion a year on their military establishments, and they are not likely to find the resources to deal with their growing populations until they can make substantial reductions in their defence budgets.



LEONID BREZHNEV
. . . better understanding

The Nixon-Brezhnev communique on the limitation of strategic offensive arms deals more in principles than in specifics. It does little more than give the SALT II negotiators new instructions to get back to Geneva and try to come up with "a permanent agreement on more complete measures" to control strategic weapons.

This is about all they could do for the time being, for they are now negotiating the most complicated problem ever attempted by two sovereign nations, not merely to limit the numbers of nuclear weapons, but to agree on the quality of those weapons — on such things as multiple warheads on missiles, and the old problem of inspection and verification of whatever agreements are reached.

Both President Nixon and General Secretary Brezhnev are likely to be out of office long before the objectives of their agreements are reached, but they are keeping the process of negotiation going, and if as much progress is made in the next 27 years before the end of the century as was made in the last 27 years since the end of the Second World War, these meetings may achieve the historic objectives claimed for them by the two leaders.

Even personal freedom, which seems to terrify the Communists more than atomic weapons, is making a little slow progress as a result of these talks. The freedom of the Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel has not been solved, but mainly as a result of pressure from here, Brezhnev has made some concessions and has tolerated American interference with his internal laws more than any American President would have tolerated similar interference from the Soviet Union.

Relations Improving

Meanwhile, Brezhnev has had a look at this vast continental country and a better understanding of its political and business leaders. Looking back 14 years, Nikita Khrushchev came here and went away, not with any great agreements, but with a few doubts about his own anti-American prejudices. Relations between the two countries, helped no doubt by growing Sino-Soviet hostility, have been improving ever since.

Accordingly, the question is not whether these agreements have established an ideal or even sensible relationship between the two giants, but whether they have maintained the negotiating process and made things better than they were. After all, an isolated and frustrated Soviet Union with enough atomic weapons to blow up the world is not a very happy prospect. Even an unequal deal, if it builds confidence, is better than that.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Fact and Fantasy

Do you really pay for articles such as that by Ian Adams in the May 26 issue of Weekend? Or do you, as has been suggested to me, publish them to give renewed currency to Dr. Johnson's assessment of the contributions of scribblers?

The article is, of course, a mixture of fact and fabrication, of fantasy and foolishness — probably in roughly equal proportions. I can make such an assertion confident in the knowledge that fewer than 20 Canadians know as much about the Columbia affair (or should I say "affray") as I do. On the basis of the article he has written I can only conclude that Mr. Adams does not qualify for inclusion in that select group. But he should not feel too badly. Of those who have used the press and-or the air waves to spread their versions — and assessments — of the Columbia business only one can be said to be really well informed.

By this time next year the definitive history of the Columbia negotiations should be available. Reading it should be a not unprofitable exercise for Mr. Adams. It is even possible that he will be convinced that he should call it to the attention of Mr. Barrett, Mr. Davis and Mr. McGeer. — G. R. Elliott, 2608 Cavendish.

Should Be Consulted

Residents of a certain area should be consulted and be able to express their opinion by free vote, without any pressure, when a development — a European-type cafe, etc. — is planned. No plan should be carried out against the will of a section of the population which will be directly affected by new structures or amenities, and so forth.

Recently the good people of Saanich rejected by a 73 per cent vote a proposed beer outlet and surely they must be congratulated for turning out in great number to freely express their opinions in that matter.

Freedom is not just a right given us, but it is a continuous process, an ideal that can only be maintained by our vigilant will and concern. We must defend it in every day, apparently small, occurrences, as we defended it in two world wars. It is our most precious heritage and its erosion will end in suffering and despair. — E. J. Lattes, 450 Simcoe St.

Stunned

On Page 7, June 20, I read with amazement that our Trudeau government is giving $4,670 to a group of people in Minden, Ontario, to look for mushrooms and to another group $6,125 for a "get together."

As a taxpayer I'm stunned. — A. P. Rainey, 577 Transit Rd.

Real Progress

The present trend to facilitate automobile usage is resulting in the loss of more and more precious agricultural and recreational land for the building of freeways, bridges and terminals.

The proposed ferry terminal at the south end of Gabriola Island would require an entire 27 acre island to be sacrified for a terminal and parking lot and much of the best farm and grazing land on the island would be covered in asphalt for a freeway across it.

Development of this kind on the Island will result in the loss of a rural way of life which many people seek for permanent homes or for holiday recreation — another refuge from the pressures of city living will be lost for all time as land development follows in the wake of creating another Vancouver-Nanaimo suburb. The ensuing rush for property within commuting distance of the cities could eventually lead to the destruction of a chain of closely linked Gulf Islands. At best, this solution to automobile traffic pressure will be good for only a few years. Then what??

Progress is no longer economic growth in terms of industrial development and commercial gain. Real progress is public awareness of the destructive forces of a materialistic society and the planned development of our environment to rectify damage already done and to save agricultural, recreational and wilderness areas for essential human contact with nature. Our children need room to grow — let's leave them some. —Elma Gavin, Public Relations Officer, Gulf Islands Committee, Gabriola Island.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 27, 1913

If Jack Johnson the Negro pugilist, who is under $15,000 bail in Chicago pending appeal from a conviction in a white slavery case, and unexpectedly came to Canada, does at once prove to the immigration officials at Montreal that he holds a through ticket to France or St. Petersburg, as he maintains, he will be arrested and sent back to Chicago as quickly as the machinery of the law permits. If the United States circuit court of appeals sustains Johnson's conviction, his one year sentence for violating the white slave law will be enforcible anytime he returns to the United States.

Royal Tours A Reminder

By JAMES EAYRS

Royal touring serves a variety of purposes among which pleasurable diversion of the Royal Tourists is far down on the list. The novelty of travel has long since worn thin for them. "We don't come here for our health," Prince Philip admitted in his sweet-tempered way during a recent sojourn among fluttered folk and wild, "we can think of better ways of enjoying ourselves."

Why then do the Royal Tourists tour? Why don't they stay at home? Because duty calls them thither, and calls most powerfully. "She likes her horses," Harold Macmillan recorded in his diary as the Queen and her massive entourage hit the road once more. "But she loves her duty."

The monarchy exists to bring pleasure to its subjects, and duty's first call is to please them. Royal visits clearly do. At worst they induce apathy, at best they produce joy.

"Wherever she goes," an ardent monarchist has written, "that spot is momentarily the centre of the Commonwealth, and the soldier on parade, the artisan at his bench, the nurse by the bedside and the patient under her care, are enabled to feel themselves exalted by the recognition of their place in a world-wide family and a vast design." Policy needs no more defence than that it makes people feel good all over.

They Stir Pride

There is another reason for Royal Touring. Such visits as we now experience stir pride among the visited. Time to coincide with some historical commemoration — the tricentennial of Kingston's founding, the bicentennial of Prince Edward Island's federation — they help to revitalize the past, become a catalyst for recollection. The Queen herself perceives this sharply. "Nations need to be reminded of their corporate identity from time to time," she told a New Zealand audience in 1970. "If my presence has helped to make a little more clear what it means to be a New Zealander I will be more than satisfied."

No act of state is purely altruistic. Royal Touring is meant to be more than mere bringer of excitement into humdrum lives, quickener of purpose within the nation visited. It serves, and is meant to serve, as an instrument of foreign policy — British foreign policy.

Aid Civil Power

When Royal Touring first began it involved no altruism at all. "I am convinced that were it possible for me, accompanied by the Queen, to go to India, the greatest benefits would accrue. It would tend to allay unrest and, I am sorry to say, seditious spirit". So George V conceived his Durbar of 1911 — as aid to the civil power.

The next Royal Visit of consequence was to Canada during the early summer of 1939. Its purpose was to elicit and proclaim Ango-Canadian unity. Such a demonstration might deter a war; if not, might hasten victory.

Lord Tweedsmuir, then governor-general, described the ensuing scene at the Cenotaph in Ottawa when King George VI and Queen Elizabeth mingled with the crowd: "The faces of the Scotland Yard detectives I shall never forget! But the veterans made a perfect bodyguard. It was wonderful to see old fellows weeping, and crying, 'Ay, man, if Hitler could just see this:' "

Hitler, as it happened, was looking the wrong way. War was not deterred. But a year later the Fuhrer was informed that "the British Empire is not expected to collapse owing to the peculiar innate force of the political objectives embodied in the conception of the Commonwealth of Nations". So it proved, and the Royal Visit played its part in the result. Royal touring continued to serve the needs of British foreign policy after the war.

The Royal Tour of South Africa in 1947-48 improved relations with a country whose Parliament had declared war against Germany by only the narrowest of margins.

The Royal Tour of Ghana in 1961 kept Dr. Nkrumah's republic in the Commonwealth and stopped him going over to the Russians.

The Royal Tour of Australia in 1970 had as one of its objectives the strengthening of British ties with a people whose leader had lately resolved to go "all the way with LBJ".

The Royal Tour of New Zealand, also in 1970, conveyed the continuing interest that most loyal of the Old Dominions of Britain about to enter Europe and to leave Southeast Asia.

And all these Royal Tours, together with State visits to foreign lands of which there have been roughly thirty since the Queen came to the throne, including forays behind the Iron Curtain, are designed to pep up British trade.

Do other monarchies in the Commonwealth have the right to use their Queen this way? Unquestionably. But so far they have not tried.

Promote Unity

The government of Canada seeks to use the Queen of Canada to promote the unity of Canada, but not to promote the foreign policy of Canada or the foreign trade of Canada.

Here is an anomaly, and it ought to be removed. Not for the sake of our foreign policy and foreign trade — no amount of Royal Touring on their behalf is likely to make much difference — but for the sake of the future of our monarchy.

Canadians can understand how a British sovereign reigns over us without subordinating us, but the British find it harder. Their views of Royal Visits to other realms is that they have loaned their Queen for these occasions. Putting the monarch on the road is to them a part of the British technical assistance program.

If that view persists, Pierre Trudeau's prediction of December 23, 1969 that "the values of the new generation . . . may lead Canada to give up its connections with the royal family in the coming decade" will surely be borne out.

Fortunately for those Canadians who value monarchy there is an easy remedy. We should send the Queen of Canada on a Royal Tour of Britain. It should take place during November 1976 not because the London weather is finest at that season but because it was then, fifty years ago, that the relations between the two countries were formally defined: "Autonomous communities, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs . . ." There could be no more educative experience for everyone concerned.

The Queen and her subjects

A 'Modest Ministry' Holding Ottawa Fort

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The prime impression made by the Trudeau ministry at this time of its survival, five months after it might have well been gone, is of middling, unexciting competence. Especially "competence" in the dicey partisan balance of forces, best symbolized by the developed testiness between the Conservatives and the New Democrats.

The cabinet — 30 strong — seems curiously unfit in its very mediocrity — at least a mediocrity in which few ministers perform or are seen to perform above that rating but, and it's an important "but," very few perform below it.

To rip out the strongest impressions: The greatest achievements have been by Allan MacEachen and Marc Lalonde, the latter openly as a firm, clear, brisk, confident spokesman for his subject field, MacEachen as the careful broker and planner whom the PMO lets call the tactics for survival and parliamentary scheduling.

The most durable man of constant power and influence, however, remains, as he was through most of the first Trudeau ministry, Charles (Bud) Drury, self-recognized "dinosaur" and keeper of the federal purse.

The staggering change, the one to which most of us have still not adjusted, is the steady parade of Mr. Trudeau across the low ground of politics.

Long-time voyeurs, such as elderly House employees, compare him more often with Mackenzie King in his determination to survive in power and his able fudging of potentially wrathful tests. He's playing well the Pearson kind of buddy-buddy availability to even the least importunate Liberal backbencher. It's more than that his door is open. He's bumping around the halls, stopping at tables, with an open wholesomeness that finds even an unabashed, folksy role for wife and child.

Neither in the cabinet nor in the caucus does there seem to be a "left" or "liberal" wing and a "right" or "conservative" wing. Such a normal condition of most governments seems suspended for the duration. Anything a coalescence of Drury, Turner and Lalonde is for, happens, but their conservatism in the field of economics and federal-provincial relations is softened by a willingness to consider favorably almost any program — e.g. OFY, LIP, New Horizons — that will make a good impression somewhere. The obsession of 1968-1972 with structure, priorities and process is so subdued you can hardly feel it.

The allegedly radicals in the ministry — Munro, Pelletier, Marchand, MacEachen, Basford, Macdonald, Ouellette, Faulkner — have no strong figure anxious to use power around whom they could coalesce.

DRURY
. . . holds the power

There never ceases to be a rating game in Ottawa as to who are the comers, the potential successors to the top post. All one can sense is that Donald Macdonald's stock has tumbled out of sight; that Otto Lang, for all his intellect, hasn't drawn any ministerial or caucus colleagues onto his coat tails; that Hugh Faulkner is presently the only Anglophone about whom men whisper "prospect," that Lalonde has quickly become the man (not John Turner) who would be only a heart attack away from the succession.

Messrs. Stanbury, Dube, Richardson, Gray and new ministers Gillespie, Haidasz, Don Macdonald and Allmand are all innocuous . . . neither adornments nor, with the exception of Mr. Haidasz, possible liabilities in the short-run. Jean Pierre Goyer has almost vanished from sight in Supply and Services. Jim Richardson, in DND, is off where he can enjoy himself and cause no great harm. Bob Andras muddles along, ducking contention whenever possible, especially in the House, still searching, one imagines, for a bonus such as came to Edgar Benson.

Jeanne Sauve is in a backwater quite untesting of her large talents. Jean Chretien continues steady in the truly difficult post looking after Indians, the North and parks. Don Jamieson has blarneyed himself almost out of sight in DREE. His old-fashioned skills are not much use without an iron determination to seize and do something. Jean Marchand continues to be the weakest minister in a high-profile area.

Jack Davis plows along, lonely and aloof in the Environment portfolio, hesitantly respected by his colleagues who all pray he might become a bit more politically sensitive. Mitchell Sharp is the focus of no grouping although he passes along, careful and regardful of his ministry. Paul Martin is surprisingly active for a Senate-bound minister, still the finagler every long, waking hour.

The best hunch I can offer about the present ministry is that internally it is essentially Bud Drury's; that in open sight in Parliament, it is primarily Allan MacEachen's with the PM alongside; that in terms of movement towards a new dispensation, given an election victory next time for the government, it is Marc Lalonde's or John Turner's, with the balance swinging towards the Montrealer unless there are miracles in the economy and job creation this fall and winter.

Perhaps the nicest thing about the present ministry is relevant only to close onlookers and irrelevant to the country as a whole.

In a word, this is a modest ministry. It has earned that tag in as complete a reversal in style, tone and method since last October as even its meanest critics could have wished.

Peron's Political Melange

By LEWIS H. DIUGUID

BUENOS AIRES — When the triumphal return of former president Juan Peron turned into a shootout, both of the opposing Peronist factions were acting in the conviction that they were serving the interests of their revered leader.

The Peronist movement is all things to most Argentines. During its 30 turbulent years of existence, its sole unifying force has been Peron himself, now 77, who has just ended 18 year of exile.

This relationship between the man and the movement is almost the classic Latin American case of the caudillo, or political strongman, and his followers. Almost, but not quite.

Argentina is perhaps the most southern European country in Latin America. Greater Buenos Aires, with more than eight million people, has more citizens of Italian descent than Rome and more of Spanish origin than Madrid.

★ ★ ★

While the Peronism that attracts most of them is fundamentally nationalist, it also is flavored with fascism, anarchism and syndicalism, political ideologies which have all had their day in the Latin countries of southern Europe. Peron received his own grounding in European political ideologies as a military observer with Italian fascist troops.

When Peron was president, from 1946 to 1955, he came up with his own ideology, "justicialism," a melange of all these European currents, and more.

Ideology was secondary then, by most accounts. Now, a more coherent body of political thought, Marxism, plays a role in Peronism, just as it does increasingly throughout Latin America.

Marxists who opposed the Peronists in the old days as overly emotional and bourgeois, now tend to join the movement, convinced that the masses support it.

Young people, who elsewhere might be attracted to Marxist socialism, here tend to believe that Peron can bring radical change. They have no personal memory of his rule, and he has encouraged them to believe he shares their goals.

The foundation of Peronism is the labor movement, which, for the most part, does not appear to be Marxist at all.

Peron came to power via the labor ministry, to which he was assigned as an army officer during a shaky period of military rule. He recognized the exclusion of the growing urban proletariat from the rest of Argentine society and set out to do something about it.

Col. Peron was aided by his second wife, Eva, who had at least as much charisma as he did. They quickly took full power, and Peron was elected president by a large margin.

Peron's government spent its way through the big foreign-exchange reserves pro-Axis but neutral Argentina had built up by exports during World War II. By the mid-1950s, Peron had made enough enemies to be overthrown by a substantial counter-movement.

His working class supporters, "the shirtless ones," whom he had clothed in style, did not lose the faith. The labor movement was by then so powerful an organized force that succeeding military dictatorships had to make their peace with the General Labor Federation.

Today the CGT is the main pillar of the Peronist movement, and a relatively conservative influence in Argentine society.

The CGT includes fascist thugs and corrupt bosses without a political base as well as union leaders concerned with improving the lot of their followers. Several of these representative leaders have been assassinated in recent years for allegedly collaborating with military governments and "imperialist" factory owners. The assassins and the victims alike all considered themselves good Peronists.

★ ★ ★

In addition to the great bulk of the labor movement that is within the Buenos Aires CGT, there are a few particularly militant Peronist unions that would be called Marxist anywhere else.

In the formal structure of the Peronist movement, labor is one of three major branches, along with the women's and the youth wings. There is also a Peronist business group. Its long-time leader, Jose Gelbard, is now finance minister. Like the CGT, the business group is a conservative influence within the Peronist movement.

At times it seems that the primary role of the women's branch is to keep alive the image of "Evita," who died of cancer two decades ago. A couple of women are included in the councils of the movement, which used to meet in Madrid and are now convened at Peron's residence here, rather than at the home of his protege, Hector Campora, the recently elected president.

In any case, the women in the Peronist movement also seem to be a force for conservativism.

The youth wing is another matter. While the Peronist youth organization embraces all currents, its main thrust is leftist and its cutting edge is Marxist. The youth wing's tactics often are as rough as those of the right-wing labor goons.

It was the gunslingers of these two tendencies who battled with guns for favored positions in the huge crowd that turned out for Peron's homecoming.

Both the Peronist youth and the CGT's own youth wing seem to be convinced that Peronism will not be pure until either the "socialists" or the "fascists" are purged.

★ ★ ★

Peron manages to maintain a certain control over these unruly rival supporters by letting competitors fight it out until a winner is apparent. Then, he proclaims the dominant side the winner. The wisdom of his decision is then widely recognized.

Peron addressed the nation and called for unity without rancor. The terms he used were disappointing to the left wing of his movement, which is convinced that unity with the conservatives is impossible.

But, so far, no one within the movement publicly will voice doubts that Peron can resolve the differences. The Peronists, after all, waited 18 years to have him back here making the decisions.

The old general's voice is paternal, clear and strong. He uses earthy words that the working man uses and that other politicians do not. He plays on the nationalism of an intensely proud people.

Partly because of Peron's unwillingness to tolerate rivals and also because the years of military rule stunted the growth of civilian political leadership, Argentina has no clear alternative to Peron. This is in itself a source of his power.

Many who bitterly oppose him will at the same time declare that he is the only one capable of unifying the country.

MASS CHICAGO SLAYING

PALOS HILLS, Ill. (UPI) — Seven persons were killed in this quiet, wooded southwest Chicago suburb Tuesday in one of the worst mass slayings in Illinois history after an unemployed carpenter went berserk with a rifle, police said.

William Workman, 43, was charged with the slayings of his parents, a pregnant neighbor woman and her 12-year-old daughter after being driven from his home by tear gas.

Police said Workman also apparently shot three persons in their home two blocks away, but they were waiting for verification of evidence before charging him with those murders.

Police said Workman was sipping from a can of beer as he surrendered peacefully. When arraigned, he told the judge he was "God's son" and had a history of mental illness.

"I had to take matters into my own hands," he told Judge Anthony Montelione.

"My mind was completely out of it."

Public defenders asked him to refrain from saying anything else.

Election Fever High on Eve of Manitoba Vote

By STEVE KERSTETTER

WINNIPEG (CP) — If one issue has dominated Manitoba's election campaign, it is the government itself, the policies of Premier Ed Schreyer's New Democratic Party and its record since 1969.

The campaign has failed to reflect the stormy debate in five sessions of the legislature under its first NDP government, and the choice that awaits voters Thursday is whether four years of NDP rule has left them better or worse.

Close to 600,000 Manitobans are eligible to vote between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., and interest in advance polls indicates a larger turnout on election day than the 63 per cent who voted in 1969, when 521,240 were eligible.

Both Conservative Leader Sidney Spivak and Liberal Leader Izzy Asper have urged voters to reject their "flirtation with socialism" and return their parties to their traditional leading roles in Manitoba politics.

The NDP won a surprise victory in the last election, but with only 28 MLAs was one short of a majority in the 57-member house. The Conservatives elected 22, the Liberals five, Social Credit one, and one seat was won by an independent.

During its term the NDP was able to gain a slim majority but there were also defections from the caucus last year.

Standing in the legislature at dissolution May 25 were NDP 29, Conservatives 20, Liberals four, Social Credit one, independents two and one seat vacant.

DOMINATES ADS

Premier Schreyer has waged a vigorous campaign aimed at increasing his party's strength in the north and in traditionally Conservative rural areas of the south. He has travelled throughout the province and played a dominant role in NDP advertising.

While the premier had made a modest number of election pledges, including government fire insurance, a government supported refinery for minerals and the beginning of a dental care plan, the thrust of his appeal has been the government's record.

Tax changes aimed at helping lower-income voters, lower premiums under government automobile insurance and a "stay option" for rural residents are among the accomplishments outlined under the party's campaign slogan, "Keep your government yours."

For the two opposition leaders, the main task has been to rally the non-socialist vote, a task that has led them to attack each other almost as much as the NDP.

Mr. Spivak, whose party formed the official opposition in the last legislature, has cast himself as the beneficiary of any reaction against the NDP, and has come out with a multitude of policy alternatives a Conservative government would follow.

The main emphasis in the Tory campaign, however, has been a thinly-veiled appeal to Liberals to forgo their traditional party loyalty and throw their support behind the Conservatives.

Mr. Asper sees the key issue in the campaign in much the same way: whether the NDP should be re-elected.

SAYS TORIES ON WANE

Unlike Mr. Spivak, the Liberal leader sees Tory strength in a long-term decline, beginning with the last years of Premier Duff Roblin and ending Thursday with the party's fall to third-party status.

"We sincerely believe that this election goes into its final stage as a race between the Liberals and the NDP," he said Tuesday. "We have continued to gain ground daily since the beginning of this campaign and the Conservative position has continued to erode."

As the campaign draws to a close, the Liberals have staked themselves out as the most clear-cut philosophical alternative to the NDP, as exemplified in their slogan," Self control, not state control."

Differences between the NDP and the Conservatives are less distinct, with both parties advocating a measure of government intervention in the province's economic life.

The differences are most apparent in the Tories' call for private insurance companies to compete with Autopac, the government monopoly, and in Mr. Spivak's call for the replacement of the Manitoba Development Corp. with a privately-managed growth fund to help struggling businesses.

In other areas, the policy differences between the three major parties have blurred. All three parties, for example, are proposing plans to assist residents to buy their own homes and all have called for a better deal for Western Canada from the federal government and large corporations.

Kidnapped Infant Needs Medicine

LONDON (AP) — The mother of a kidnapped infant whose time is likely running out because of her need for medication appealed early today to the abductor "to at least give me some hope."

"If you are afraid to take my baby to the police, to a hospital or to a doctor, then just leave her in a church," said the mother, Shirley Bullen, 28. "Pin a note to her, saying who she is and asking the person who finds her to take her straight to a hospital.

"Whoever took my baby, I ask that they look after her," she said. "I want them to give my baby back before it's too late. But more important, I want them to make sure she does not die."

The police mounted an intensive search here for the missing six-week-old child, Kirsten Bullen, taken from her carriage Monday.

A doctor treating Kirsten said she might suffer brain damage and could die in two days if she does not get the drug phenobarbitone regularly.

The baby was snatched from her carriage on a sidewalk while her mother was in a public lavatory in Bromley, a southeast London suburb.

There was no report of any ransom note and police speculated that intensive news coverage of the baby's plight might have frightened the kidnappers into hiding.

Tots Enliven Royal Opening

TORONTO (CP) — The royal opening of the Queen Elizabeth Playground at the Toronto Sick Children's Hospital Tuesday may have been a formal occasion, but a little leg-pulling was in store for the Duke of Edinburgh.

Following the opening, Prince Philip and Queen Elizabeth were drifting through the playground when 17-month-old Patrick Loughren of Calgary suddenly realized he was too short to shake hands.

So he tugged at the Duke's trouser leg.

Also making his presence felt was Taofik Adeosum, a Toronto two-year-old, who threw clumps of grass at Prince Philip.

Sitting next to Taofik, Michael Passmore of Peterborough, Ont., also two, was enthusiastically waving two Union Jacks until he turned his attention to a red plastic car — just as the royal couple passed by.

No 3rd Party Summit Deal

RAMBOUILLET, France (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev assured President Georges Pompidou Tuesday his summit talks with President Nixon last week produced no U.S.-Soviet decision involving any other country.

"It was neither the intention nor the consequence of his summit with Nixon to take decisions on behalf of other countries," Elysee Palace spokesman Xavier Marchetti said Brezhnev told Pompidou after the two leaders met for more than three hours at the 14th century royal castle of Rambouillet.

As the two men headed today into a second day of wide-ranging discussions, French government officials said Pompidou intended to tell Brezhnev France was determined to continue building up its nuclear arsenal despite the U.S.-Soviet agreement reached in Washington to rule out nuclear conflicts.

Gov't Pulp Shares Trade Next Week

By AL FORREST
Business Editor

Shares of the provincial government's Canadian Cellulose Company Ltd. will begin trading next week on stock exchanges in Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal.

It will be the first time a British Columbia government company has gone public and traded on the exchanges.

The earlier purchase, Ocean Falls Pulp and Paper, will remain a wholly-owned Crown corporation.

Canadian Cellulose will come into being as a public company on Friday as the name of officially changed from Columbia Cellulose.

Ronald Gross, 39, of Columbia becomes president of the new company. Gross said he will ask his employees for suggestions on a new abbreviation for the company name. Columbia Cellulose was known as Colcel and the new company will not adopt the short title of Cancel.

When the shares begin trading, it will give a public reading of investor attitude towards Premier Barrett's first partnership venture.

In this case, the NDP has 7,500 partners owning 21 per cent of the Canadian Cellulose shares. Some of the partners are large institutions while others are private investors.

First reaction from investment houses is favorable towards the Canadian Cellulose shares, not so much because of the future of its pulp sales but because it unloaded $41.3 million in debt as a result of the reorganization.

Because of the lower debt burden, the company could show a healthy operating profit in its first year.

Its long-term prospects are murky, depending almost entirely upon the export market for pulp.

President-designate Gross is optimistic that the market for pulp will remain strong at least until 1976, which by coincidence is an election year.

His reasoning: "While the demand for pulp will remain cyclical, no new supply will come on stream in the near term, except for Brazil."

It was the over-capacity to produce pulp that was a major factor in the slack markets in recent years, he says.

Although Canadian Cellulose will be involved in lumber production as well, about 90 per cent of its annual sales are in pulp.

Exports are divided evenly among the United States, Japan and Europe.

On the Vancouver exchange, Columbia Cellulose shares will continue to trade until close of business July 3. Canadian Cellulose shares will be posted for trading on July 4.

The government shareholder is a holding company to be known as British Columbia Cellulose which owns the 79 per cent of the common shares.

The private investors will get one share of Canadian Cellulose for each common share of Colcel and two shares of C.C. for each preferred share of Colcel.

In addition, preferred shareholders of record May 25 will collect $1.80 per share in accrued dividend arrears. The money comes from the former owner, Celanese Corp., and not from government funds.

Celanese also forgave Canadian Cellulose (Colcel) $41.3 million in debt as part of the sale agreement. The provincial government gave no money to Celanese to buy out the subsidiary but agreed to take over Colcel's debt of $84.5 million.

Because of the distribution of shares to bup up preferred holdings, the provincial government's share of the company is reduced from 91 per cent to 79 per cent.

The new company will have total assets of $106 million comprising current assets of $51 million and net fixed assets of $55 million.

Current liabilities will be $41 million, long term liabilities will be about $65 million.

Gas Firm Profits 'Excessive'

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Macaulay, legal adviser to the Ontario government and the provincial energy board, said Consumers' Gas Co. appears to be making excessive profits.

Macaulay told a board hearing a company request for higher natural gas rates that Consumers' should think of absorbing the increased costs of Western Canadian gas.

He said he calculates that Consumers' already enjoys a yearly return of about 15 per cent on its shareholders equity.

"In my view, the company has been over-earning for 20 years."

George Carpenter, Consumers' executive vice-president, said in an interview: "I don't think he (Macaulay) has really dug into it deeply enough to make the charges he has made . . . I think we can prove they're not right."

Costly exploration efforts have been unsuccessful in locating new ore.

Saskmont Engineering Company Ltd. of Regina has been appointed engineering consultant responsible for the design of the sixth unit to be added to the Boundary Dam Power Station near Estevan.

The unit, which will have a generating capacity of up to 300 megawatts, will cost $70 million.

Saskmont Engineering had been granted a similar contract in 1970, providing design and construction assistance for the 150 megawatt unit 5 which will go into service this summer.

Saskmont is a subsidiary of Montreal Engineering Company Ltd. (Monenco).

GTE Automatic Elec.

GTE Automatic Electric (Canada) Ltd. has negotiated a sale of $11.5 million worth of telephone equipment to the Dominican Republic.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Government Employees Association has rejected a proposed two-year contract calling for a 14½ per cent wage increase.

The association represents some 12,800 Manitoba civil servants.

GROSVENOR NOW:

On May 31, all Canadian and U.S. activities of the Grosvenor Estate of London, England, were brought together under a newly formed company, GROSVENOR INTERNATIONAL HOLDINGS LIMITED. The new company is a reflection of significant changes in both the structure and scope of activities of the 900-year-old organization.

Listed on the Vancouver Stock Exchange, the new company results from an amalgamation of Grosvenor-Laing (B.C.) Limited and Redhill Investment Corporation. The latter two companies will no longer exist.

Grosvenor International Holdings Limited now takes over an extensive real estate development programme in B.C. and Hawaii, involving total expenditures of more than $75,000,000.00. A few of the company's projects are illustrated below. Among the new company's major assets is Annacis Industrial Estate, the 1,200 acre industrial park started by the Grosvenors in the 1950's. Grosvenor International Holdings also has an interest in a company owning approximately 2,000 acres of land in the Municipality of Langley, to be held for future development.

Grosvenor International's activities in B.C. and Hawaii include shopping centres, office buildings, apartments, residential sub-divisions, second home projects, resort apartment hotels and industrial buildings. This diversity of interests in both Canada and the U.S. provides a strong economic base. The activities of Grosvenor International Holdings will be controlled by a five-man Board of Directors.

Best in Birdhouses

Bluebirds will become homeowners when entries in this week's Bluebird nest box competition are set out in Vancouver Island gardens.

Judging for the regional contest was held Monday at Francis Park nature house with Mrs. Bea Gow, 2859 Scott Street, winning first prize for her box made from an orange crate covered with spruce cone scales.

Second prize was won by Dr. Verna Vilkos, 1034 Queens, for a nest box shaped like an acorn. F. D. Bolton, 103-547 Niagara, and Peter Verstraaten, 1606 Hawthorn, came third and fourth, respectively.

First prize in the children's division went to a joint effort produced by three students from Departure Bay Elementary, Nanaimo. They are Anne Rasmussen, Darrell Dunbar and Brian Shaffer.

Paul Grant, 1813 Laval, a student at Fairburn Elementary, came second and Mike Bishop, 105 Glentana, of Craigflower Elementary, was third.

Winning entries will go to the provincial competition in Vancouver early next month. The contest is sponsored by the Canadian Arthritic and Rheumatism Society whose symbol is the Bluebird.

HOUSING TOUR

Lorne Nicolson, B.C. minister responsible for housing, will be taken on a tour of Saanich family housing projects July 17.

Saanich is a leading municipality in the province in rental accommodation through privately-built attached housing schemes made possible through local land assembly and NHA financing.

The next phase of development aimed at alleviating the housing pinch is the assembly and subdivision into single family lots of about 100 acres in the upper Colquitz River basin. About 60 acres have been acquired so far.

It is proposed to divide the land into a residential community for those of lower to middle income range and offer lots at cost after provision of municipal services.

Some of the land will be set aside for open, green space and consideration will be given to making some sites suitable for attached housing on a rental, lease-to-purchase or con-

Planning Policies Freeze City Development: Mace

The city's planning policies have effectively frozen downtown development, developer Jim Mace told a meeting of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Such policies are not going to encourage redevelopment, nor save the Saanich Peninsula from urban encroachment, he said.

But regardless of stagnating development in the downtown area people are still going to come to Victoria, and proper planning would recognize that fact and allow apartment development close to the downtown area to accommodate them.

Several times during his half-hour speech, Mace criticized the city hall command.

He said while he respects the ability of the city's professional planners, it's obvious they are "hogtied" by the restrictions imposed on them by "politicians who have little knowledge" of the subject.

The result of this conflict, he said, often turns out to be "dreary, unexciting, monotonous and in some cases uneconomic" development, and that in turn can lead only to the "abandonment" of Victoria by financiers who can put their money to work more profitably elsewhere.

Mace said Victoria is a better, more alive and exciting city today than it was when he first came here in 1961, with more restaurants, more young people and a better population mix.

But in the last year or so it has lost that "tremendous impetus" due to planning policies, although parts of the downtown area are "dreadfully old" and lacking any architectural or esthetic appeal.

Victoria is already and should be actively promoted as a "haven for the retiree," Mace said.

This type of new resident doesn't bring children needing education, often doesn't bring automobiles and creates no need for additional police protection or other essential services.

"They also bring a fair amount of the green stuff with them," he added.

Mace said this group of people, the potential renters, constitute one of the major areas of responsibility facing developers who are in the process of trying to push through major apartment projects.

Their interests must be closely considered, together with the responsibility to mortgage companies which put up the financing and the need to provide the most attractive type of development possible.

The developer is the person who has to interlock these pieces of the jigsaw puzzle, put together the land assembly and reconcile the various architectural and engineering considerations, he said, adding:

"The developer only makes his profit if he wins."

Mace said it's nonsense to term developers "Mr. Moneybags," or to imply that they seek to destroy a community.

"I don't know of any developer who is consciously irresponsible," yet in Victoria such charges were constantly being hurled at developers.

During the question period Mace was tackled about the still-unfinished Westsea apartment complex at View and Quadra, which has frequently been condemned as an eyesore by city council.

He replied that the developer, George Mulek, has not been allowed to finish the project, and until it is completed it is "not fair" to criticize the development.

He agreed there were some bad examples of development in the city, but said the recent establishment of an advisory design panel, composed of qualified architects, would help to guide council in avoiding such mistakes.

Saanich to List Heritage Sites

The public should participate in the designation of "heritage areas" to be protected by Saanich municipality, council's planning committee decided Tuesday.

An advertisement asking residents to identify and protect historical properties in the muncipality will be presented for council's approval.

The committee classified possible sites as historical, municipal buildings, examples of vanishing architecture and buildings associated with prominent persons involved historically in any level of government.

Assistant planner Gil Laurenson said any list should include a two storey residence on Tolmie built in 1870. The Missionary House, West Saanich Road (which is already marked as a historic site) a number of examples of late Victorian architecture and the former municipal hall at Royal Oak, built in 1911.

But he said "historical sites have to be worked at. I don't think municipal action will work. You can't legislate love of old and historical buildings. People have to want to preserve them."

The committee's recommendation that sites be considered for designation follows an ammendment to the Municipal Act which empowers the municipality to prevent alteration of heritage buildings.

Ald. Edith Gunning said she had one criticism, however, — "The ammendment does not provide for compensation.

"And what we save must be very carefully chosen," she said.

Appeal Tops Goal

Although other fund-raising groups have difficulty reaching their targets, the Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal closed this week with $17,000 more than the original goal of $89,100.

Total amount collected in a one-night blitz by 2,600 volunteers and a mail-in campaign was $106,625.

Major Jack Barr, campaign director, said today the appeal succeeded because of hard work and the public's affection for the Army.

Barr said $16,000 had been mailed in by people who were not at home when the volunteer called.

"We're very grateful," Barr said, "now the work can go on."

The success of the campaign was announced at a meeting of the Victoria advisory board Monday.

Chairman Stan Mooney presented certificates of appreciation to campaign chairman John Wade and to Mrs. Judyth Kircher, co-chairman with Mrs. Allan Paul of the residential division.

Others on the campaign executive committee included Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, honorary chairman; Gordon Brown, vice-chairman; I. C. Dinning, treasurer; Tegid Jones, publicity; Mrs. F. E. Beran, residential vice-chairman; Harry Young, business division; Ken King, employees division; W. J. Wilson, federal division; Dr. Graham Pettapiece and Dr. Peter Semenchuck, professional division.

Gov't Buys School Pupils Displaced

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Parents here are upset about a decision to sell a school to the provincial government, forcing pupil transfers in September and relocation of a children's day care centre.

Chuck Maclean, school board chairman, says the school in the downtown section of this city, 45 miles southwest of Edmonton, will be sold because enrolment has been steadily declining. The $380,000 from the sale will pay most of the cost of a school in a new area and the old building will be used by the Agricultural Development Corp.

Maclean said the board felt it could accommodate the students at other schools although some pupils might have to walk one mile.

The school board wants to use three classes in a cottage school which has been rented for the last five years by a day care centre.

Diana Smith, spokesman for the centre, said 41 children will be displaced and there is no other building which would meet provincial day care standards.

Maclean said the board was trying to set up a meeting between all parties to explore alternatives to the relocation plans.

Long Strike Seen

EDMONTON (CP) — The 16-day strike by 1,030 service workers at the Royal Alexandra Hospital could last up to another eight weeks a union spokesman said Tuesday.

Jan Downie, national representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the strike is no longer the "hospital against union," but now has become "all hospitals against the union."

Downie charged that the refusal of the hospital board to make a new offer is the result of other hospitals telling the Royal Alexandra to use the strike "to show the rest of the hospital workers in the province what will happen" if they make demands similar to those by the striking workers.

Urge Leader Review

CALGARY (CP) — Social Credit MLA Albert Ludwig Tuesday called for a complete review of the party leadership and a caucus of MLAs to decide whether a leadership convention should be held.

Ludwig's statement came one day after party leader Werner Schimdt finished second to Progressive Conservative Stewart McCrae in the Calgary Foothills byelection. Schmidt, who narrowly won the party leadership earlier this year, trailing McCrae by 1,484 votes.

Rights 'Threatened'

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — The right of treaty Indians to hunt on crown lands could be endangered if these lands are designated wilderness areas and opened to recreational development, Chief John Snow of the Stoney Indian band said Tuesday.

Chief Snow told land use hearings conducted by the Alberta Environment Conservation Authority he is concerned that the livelihood of his people may be at stake with the development of the eastern slope region of the Rocky Mountains.

TB ON RESERVE MAJOR PROBLEM

CALGARY (CP) — Eighteen cases of active tuberculosis were found among the 1,600 people on the Stoney Indian reserve west of Calgary last year.

Dr. Bill Cochrane, who will assume duties as provincial deputy health minister Aug. 1, told a meeting of the Canadian Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association Tuesday that this indicated a major problem in health care.

His comments came following reports Monday by Dr. Stefan Grzybowski of Vancouver that TB among Canadian Indians and Eskimos was higher than in developing nations.

The figures for the Stoney reserve were considerably higher than the national averages for Canadian Indians given by Dr. Grzybowski, however. The national average of 136 cases for every 100,000 Indians would mean there should have been two cases on the Stoney reserve.

Dr. Cochrane, former dean of medicine at the University of Calgary, said the increase on the reserve probably could be attributed to the fact that the university had arranged for a doctor to live there last year.

The activities of this doctor in finding cases on the reserve may indicate, however, that the problem of TB among Canadian Indians may be worse than expected.

Face-to-Face Justice

CAIRO — The courts convicted him of killing his wife and sent him to prison for life. Ten years later another prisoner stepped into his cell and confessed to the murder. The confession, reported Tuesday by Al Ahram newspaper, happened at Torah Prison near Cairo. Prison officials confirmed Al Ahram's account, which said:

An agronomist, Azmy Abdel Tawab Marei, was convicted of embezzlement and was sent to the prison to serve his eight-year sentence. In his cell he came face-to-face with another convict, 55-year-old Hafez Ghoneim, whom he recognized as the husband of the woman he said he killed. Marei collapsed and confessed to a prison officer.

CHARLOTTETOWN — Too much emphasis is placed on the skid-row alcoholic at the expense of the middle-and upper-class alcoholic, Marty Mann, founder and consultant for the National Council on Alcoholism of New York said Tuesday.

Mrs. Mass said "skid-row alcoholics are at most five-per-cent of alcoholics yet most of the money and programs have been directed towards them." The particular drawback with this situation is that the skid-row alcoholic has the least chance of recovery, she said, while programs might be able to help the other alcoholics.

TOPEKA, Kan. — Dr. John Nichols says he has been trying for 18 years to get the American Medical Association to take his name out of its directory. He now has sued the AMA for $132,500. Nichols contends he has spent 650 hours in the last six years handling trash mail which he says he received as the result of being listed in the association's directory. At $50 an hour, he figures the AMA owes him $32,500. He also asked for a $100,000 penalty, plus court costs and lawyers' fees.

TEL AVIV — Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan and his long-time companion, Rahel Korem, were married Tuesday in a private ceremony at the suburban home of chief army rabbi Mordechai Piron.

LOS ANGELES — A federal grand jury has indicted former major league baseball player Gerry Priddy in connection with a $250,000 bomb extortion attempt involving the cruise ship Island Princess earlier this month. Priddy, 53, of North Hollywood, played for the Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees. He was indicted Monday on a count of "interference with commerce by threats of violence."

AMA Lifts Ban on Drug Investments

By STUART AUERBACH

NEW YORK (WP) — The American Medical Association has revealed that it has lifted restrictions on investing any of its money in drug companies. The restrictions had been in effect at least 10 years because of a potential conflicts of interest.

The judicial council, the AMA body that deals with such questions of ethics, made its latest decision in investments at the request of the AMA board of trustees. The decision affects three AMA investment portfolios, totaling $25 million, covering reserves, employee retirement and education and research programs.

The AMA had earlier invested $10 million from its members' retirement fund in drug company stocks.

This investment was approved by the judicial council last year so that the AMA's $134 million retirement fund "could compete with other funds providing the same sort of service," an AMA "fact sheet" said.

An AMA spokesman said that until now the AMA has voluntarily banned investments of any of its funds in drug companies or in the tobacco industry.

While the judicial council has ruled that it is of questionable ethics for an individual physician to invest in drug company stocks, it said Sunday that it is not unethical for the corporate body of the AMA to make such investments, an AMA spokesman reported.

The AMA has been accused of being under the influence of drug companies. Three doctors who headed its now abolished council on drugs said that the AMA forced the council out of existence because it published a drug evaluation manual that called some of the most profitable drugs on pharmacy shelves "irrational" and "not recommended." The AMA said the council was abolished in an economy move.

Moreover, the AMA receives 26 per cent of its income — a total of $8.6 million from drug advertising in its various medical journals.

MORE STUDY ON NAME CHANGE

Nancy Hanks has again been referred back to the Saanich planning department for further study.

The muncipality's planning committee Tuesday was asked to vote on a recommendation that a portion of the street—south of an oak tree in the middle of the road allowance—be re-named Campus Crescent.

The name change would affect four lots on the street, a logical continuation of Campus Crescent, said assistant planner Gil Laurenson.

But after close scrutiny of a map, the committee noticed "another little piece of Nancy Hanks at the bottom", running off Cedar Hill Cross Road.

"And it's ridiculous to have two streets with the same name. It's confusing," said Ald. Edith Gunning.

Ald. Waring suggested a survey of residents on the two remaining sections of Nancy Hanks, north of the oak tree and the portion off Cedar Hill Cross road, to find out who would mind a change of name.

Meanwhile, they recommended to council that Nancy Hanks south of the oak tree, be changed in favor of Campus Crescent.

Woman Heads Symphony Society

For the second time in its 33-year history, Victoria Symphony Society is headed by a woman.

Madge E. Ronahan was elected president at Tuesday's annual meeting.

She succeeds architect John Di Castri, who resigned because of "professional commitments" after serving 18 months of a two-year term.

Miss Ronahan is an executive secretary with the Department of National Defence and has served on the symphony board for a year.

Previous woman president was Miss Sara Spencer, who guided the society for several years in the 1940s and is still associated with it as honorary president, honorary life member and a donor.

The financial statement revealed a deficit for the 1972-73 season of $32,711.

It also revealed that season subscriptions were up $4,460 over the previous year, single ticket sales by nearly $3,000 and that special attractions had grossed $9,500 more than in 1972.

But as the orchestra grew and expanded its services, administration and other costs kept pace.

In his report, the retiring president noted that the series of pops concerts initiated for the first time at Memorial Arena had contributed to the deficit.

On the other hand, he suggested that they had been a great success by introducing hundreds of people to the orchestra.

Plans to cope with rising costs and the present deficit included the current membership drive.

"We must not lose sight of the fact that this is an artistic organization and its very nature is such that we cannot approach its assessment on grocery store arithmetic terms where we must simply balance dollars against cans of beans.

"We must consider the long range view and realize that while some of our undertakings have resulted in a deficit, the benefits to this organization in the long haul could well offset this by many times.

"The deficit should only be an incentive for the coming year to work harder and get out and get more funds," he concluded.

Music director Laszlo Gati, who has now completed seven years on the Victoria Symphony podium, told the meeting that 80 per cent of the orchestra membership is totally involved with music.

Other officers elected were Alan G. Aldous and A. Douglas Turnbull, vice-presidents; A. A. C. Harris, honorary treasurer, and Irvine Dawson, honorary secretary.

Also appointed to the executive was Mrs. Evelyn McGee, president of the Women's Committee, which will be constituted as a branch society.

Otrers elected or re-elected derhill, E. Aolstem, Reg Hind, E. T. M. McBride, J. S. Beattie, P. J. Kitley, J. M. McPherson, Dr. J. F. K. English, Cmdr. L. D. Hall, Mrs. Daisie Thirlwall and Robert Early.

On the board with one more year to serve of a two-year term are T. L. McMaster, Howard Denike, Eugene M. Johnson and J. R. Meredith.

Argentine Abductors Grab Boy, 10, From Granny

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A 10-year-old boy snatched from his grandmother's hands as she walked him to a school bus stop Tuesday became the 11th reported kidnap victim in Argentina in two days.

Fifteen persons, among them an American and three other foreigners, are still in abductors' hands throughout the country. There have been more than 70 kidnapings in Argentina this year and more than $7 million has been paid in ransom — much of it to urban guerrillas.

In Tuesday's kidnaping, elderly Berta Radininsky told police she was walking her grandson, Oscar, to a bus stop just south of the capital when a car pulled up and a man jumped out, pulled the boy into the car and sped away with him.

Police said that so far there had been no demand for ransom. The boy's grandfather, owner of an automobile parts shop, would not talk to reporters.

Unused Space Cost Taxpayer $150,000

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Alberta MP Jed Baldwin Tuesday accused the federal government of wasting taxpayers' money by spending $150,000 in rent for space that stood vacant for almost a year.

Baldwin, Progressive Conservative House leader, referred to "the unique arrangement" whereby Information Canada leased space in Montreal which it left empty for some ten months in 1971-72.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) also suggested that Information Canada paid $300,000 to break the lease agreement and that the rent it paid was way out of line.

Labor Minister John Munro, while denying that any money whatsoever had been paid to break the lease or the rent was too high, admitted that $150,000 was paid for space not needed.

Baldwin questioned Treasury Board president C. M. Drury as to why space needs weren't put out to tender.

Drury told the Commons that in some instances the public works department is required to meet a specification which can only be met by one possible landlord.

In such cases there isn't much use in putting out to tender.

The Alberta MP also charged that Information Canada had spent "very substantial" sums of money on a program called Automatic Information Monitoring Service and that the program was subsequently "scuttled" because there was no apparent need for it.

Munro, fighting off attacks from Hees, said that while the building in Montreal was empty for 10 months during that period a mezzanine floor was constructed in it.

This increased the space by some 2,200 square feet and had a marked effect on reducing the overall square footage cost.

The Ontario Tory hit back at the government by saying that while Information Canada paid $25 per square foot in Montreal the highest prices paid in other cities for "even better accommodation" was only $8 a square foot.

Munro said Hees had been misled by a newspaper article on which his question was based.

Figures in that article referred to both gross and net amounts.

In Montreal, Information Canada had been offered alternative premises at either $32 of $20-$21 per square foot — so $25 wasn't too out of line.

The labor minister also told the Commons when the contract was signed in Toronto the real estate market was "soft" while when the lease was signed in Montreal the market was "hard."

Four other MPs — two from Western Canada — also raised questions in the Commons about possible waste of the taxpayers' money.

FORD, GM FACE AUSSIE ATTACK

Manchester Guardian

CANBERRA — Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam renewed his attack on General Motors Corp. Tuesday in an atmosphere of growing confrontation between the government and Australia's American-dominated car industry.

His accusation that General Motors was violating the law by announced a five-per-cent price rise came within hours of an attack by Labor Minister Clyde Cameron on the Ford Motor Co.

Whitlam said he would consider using tariffs, subsidies and government contracts as weapons to contain price rises.

Only a week ago, Whitlam attacked General Motors for replacing its Australian general manager, Allan Gibbs, with an American, Damon Martin, and said he expected that the firm's sales would suffer as a result.

Martin was appointed apparently to plan resistance to the Australian government's growing economic nationalism which started with restrictions on foreign investment in minerals.

Australia's two big motor companies, Ford and GM, are both 100-per-cent American owned, with Ford being technically a subsidiary of Canadian Ford.

Between them they employ about 50,000 people and are heavily protected against foreign competition. The firms account for about two thirds of Australian vehicle production.

The rest of the car industry is shared by American-owned Chrysler, British Leyland and Japanese companies.

Tueday's attack by Whitlam came after General Motors announced its price increase Monday instead of waiting to have it examined by the government's price tribunal which begins operating Aug. 1.

Cameron said this week that strikers at Australian Ford were fighting a multi'national corporation based in New York.

"This is something very bad," he said. "It is a foreign company, it is owned by foreigners, its policy is being made by foreigners and Australian workers are the meat in the sandwich."

It is against this background that Whitlam's cabinet Tuesday began an examination of the car industry which could allow the Japanese a much more competitive share.

(Lucky for you!)

Even the experts make mistakes. Canada's leading manufacturer of men's sportswear, for instance (who wishes to remain anonymous — for reasons of embarrassment). Which meant we had to lower our prices even more.

Well for us, it's a goof. But for you — it's something else! A special chance to save a bundle on smart, top quality sportswear!

Among the Chaos and Disorder May Be That 'Real Find' for You

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

To meander down the lower reaches of Johnson Street is to come face to face with Victoria's alter ego, the antithesis of "smart" downtown with its department stores and candy shops and tourist gimmicks.

Here is the nether-world of the secondhand shops, weird and wonderful emporiums chock-full of furniture, tools, utensils, ornaments, bric-a-brac of every conceivable (and inconceivable) kind.

Whether it's something mundane you're after, like a wrench or a coffee table, or something exotic like a Bengal tiger skin, this is the place to come.

There are no "door-opening specials" or sales, but chances are you'll be able to pick up a bargain — possibly after some good-natured but determined haggling with the proprietor.

But one doesn't have to buy something to benefit from the experience. As any true junk-shop fanatic knows, more than half the fun of the thing lies in the anticipation: in wondering whether, behind the next rusty bedstead, lies that real "find."

If the second-hand dealer has a flair for his trade — as Joe Slyth undoubtedly has — he is well aware of this quirk and he arranges his wares accordingly. In a state of splendid chaos and disorder.

Joe has been a purveyor of paraphernalia on Johnson for five years. He also dispenses something else — his own brand of Cockney humor and warmth that invariably sends his customers on their way feeling a whole lot better than when they arrived.

Take the signs, for instance. They're dotted about all over the place. One says "We buy junque and sell antiques"; another, "Free today — sympathy while it lasts."

Displayed on one wall, alongside old framed photographs of Joe as a young military musician, is a snapshot of him walking down the street with business-suited briskness, briefcase in hand.

Beneath the picture in the frame is a crumpled dollar bill, and the caption reads "On my way to the bank — the first dollar, May 1, 1969."

SLYTH
. . . humor and goods

Joe chuckles at the complete inability of some of his customers to grasp the significance of that bill. They tend to think it has some intrinsic value as a collector's item, and when he explains it was the first money he ever earned from his business they walk away, shaking their heads in bewilderment or pity.

Born in London and educated at the same poor kids' school Charlie Chaplin once attended, Joe became a bandsman first with the Gloucesters and later with the Welsh Guards.

In the years following the Second World War it wasn't exactly an onerous job. As Joe recalls: "We'd go to work at 10, have a coffee break at 11 and knock off at noon. What a life . . ."

But one of the Guards' tours abroad took him to Toronto in 1948, to play at the Canadian National Exhibition, and what he saw of the country then left an impression. So six years later, when the Canadian Army was spending thousands of dollars recruiting British servicemen as band personnel, Joe didn't need much persuading.

He played the clarinet for the Canadian Engineers, stationed at Chilliwack, until his retirement in 1966 and bought the Johnson Street business three years later.

He'd never sold anything in his life before, and his only qualification for the job was a liking for old furniture.

Do secondhand store customers fall into any distinct categories?

In Joe's experience it's hard to generalize, although he finds a fair sprinkling of young couples who are furnishing on a tight budget, as well as American tourists.

The fashion and home decorating fads of the young often create a sudden surge of demand. There was the time when Joe sold the full-dress "Chocolate Soldier" outfit of a cadet at Annapolis, the U.S. naval academy, to a long-haired youth.

"He was going to wear it," Joe says in head-shaking disbelief.

Bowlers and old hats of all kinds are a sure-seller, and a new use seems to have been found for that classic receptacle of bygone days, the china chamber pot.

"Seems they don't put it under the bed any more but on the table with flowers in it," Joe observes.

One day the shop bell jangled and "in walked this suit of armor," followed closely by the owner and would-be seller. Joe obliged, stuck a label on the metallic figure christening him "Sir Lancelot" and sold him almost immediately.

Joe admits there are days, especially in the quiet winter months, when he wonders if he's making any living at all. But then come the busy periods when even the stuff that's been lying around a long time gets sold.

Quiet or hectic, he's contented in a job that brings him into daily contact with all kinds of people. Many of them, he believes, are rebels against the chrome-and-plastic age and in search of that almost-lost quality, reliability, which they associate with an earlier era.

Modern furniture looks fine but often the flashy exterior merely masks disillusionment, in the form of cheap ply. Explaining the constant demand for old oak furniture, Joe says: "It's kind of a looking back to something that was dependable."

70-Home Co-Op Plan To Start in October

A 70-unit co-operative housing project is planned for five acres of provincially-owned land in Victoria West.

Construction of the townhouses, at a cost of $1.1 million, by the newly-formed Pioneer Co-operative Housing Association, is expected to begin in October.

Additional one-storey apartments are not included in the present capital budget.

The plan was announced today by John Warren, president of the co-operative, and representatives of the United Church, which has acted as the sponsor of the project putting up an initial $50,000.

The site is an L-shaped parcel of land, a group of vacant lots, bounded by McCaskill, Langford, Hereward Streets and the E and N rail line.

Most of the property is made up of a 4.3-acre parcel of land which the city of Victoria sold to the province in January of this year at a price of $350,000. The city sold the property on the understanding that it would be used as part of the province's land bank for housing.

The province is retaining ownership of the land — which includes some lots which the province bought separately — and is leasing it to the co-operative for a rental of $14,000 a year for 50 years.

Ald. Alf Hood, who was at the site this morning when the project was announced, said the city is pleased and "very interested" in the project.

"As far as we are concerned it must work," Hood said. "This is the first venture into co-operative housing for Victoria and we will follow it with interest because its success will effect the success of future projects of this type."

He noted that the city sold the land to the province on the understanding that the site layout is satisfactory to the city. Municipal services, including underground wiring, will be paid for by the developer, the co-operative.

Hood said he feels the projects is consistent with the over-all plan for Victoria West which he describes as a "very stable, hard core community" where there is much property that can be reclaimed from industry for "fine new housing."

Warren said he would like to see the project "bring this area a new sense of community."

The co-operative is stressing that the project is not "low cost housing" but rather "a community serving a broad income and age range."

Rev. John Wood, who represents the United Church on the board of the co-op, said the church became involved in the project because it recognizes the social need to provide housing at reasonable costs.

Financing beyond the initial contribution of the United Church is being arranged with Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. which is involved in the planning.

Sager and Marshall Associates have been retained as architects of the project.

The co-operative was incorporated in February and now has a membership of 20. Recruitment of new members is in progress.

Unlike a condominium, a whole co-operative housing project is owned by all the members of the co-op who individually lease their home from the co-op. Administration is through an elected board of directors.

Warren estimates that shares will cost in the range of $1,000 to $1,900. Members will pay a monthly rent in addition to this.

During the planning and construction phases, United Housing Foundation, a non-profit Vancouver-based organization, is assisting the Victoria group under a management contract. When the project is completed, management will be handled entirely by the local co-oprative.

She Couldn't Hear Truck

A Victoria girl hit by a truck Tuesday couldn't hear it coming because she was deaf, her father said today.

Seven-year-old Julie Duker is in poor condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital after undergoing surgery for head injuries late Tuesday.

Julie was hit on Cedar Hill Road near her home at 2855 Delatre.

"We don't know exactly what happened because she was alone at the time of the accident and there doesn't seem to be any witnesses," Julie's father, Allan, said.

The truck was driven by Robert Gingrich, 1430 Walnut, police said.

City Hires Its First Full-Time Solicitor

Jacob de Villiers, senior partner in a Victoria law firm, has been named to succeed Terry O'Grady as Victoria's city solicitor, Mayor Peter Pollen announced today.

De Villiers, 44, takes up his duties Sept. 1 and, unlike O'Grady, will be on a full-time salaried basis.

O'Grady is leaving to join the newly-established Insurance Corporation of B.C., the provincial government agency which will handle the public auto insurance scheme.

De Villiers was a member of the Southern Rhodesia Bar from 1956 to 1963 and from 1963 to 1965 he was a member of the Alberta Bar, employed in the provincial attorney-general's office.

He was called to the Bar of B.C. in 1965 and is the senior partner in the Victoria firm of de Villiers, Jones, Emery and Carfra.

Pollen said the city's contract with O'Grady's firm left him free to undertake other legal work in a private capacity, but to meet the present requirements of the city and follow the example of other city corporations it has been decided to appoint an "in-house" solicitor.

De Villiers' appointment was recommended Tuesday by council's committee of the whole and will be ratified at Thursday's full council meeting. Pollen said the salary has yet to be confirmed.

Mayor Wants to Control Self-Serve Gas Stations

Mainly because of safety considerations, Victoria council is becoming concerned at the "quiet intrusion" of self-service gasoline stations, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen told reporters the oil companies' new policy is a "very retrogressive" one, as council feels attendants should always be on duty at service stations both in the interest of motorists and nearby residents.

The mayor noted that a driver impaired by alcohol could pull up at a self-service station, light up a cigarette while filling his tank and "blow the whole thing to kingdom come."

He said the normal services provided by station attendants — windshield cleaning, oil and tire checks — are also invaluable to the general safety of automobiles.

The subject has been discussed at two meetings of council's Advisory Planning Commission, "with a great deal of differing opinion," and the planning director has been asked to present a report on possible city controls.

Pollen pointed out that present zoning policies do not specifically prohibit or attach restrictions to self-service gas stations.

Two Years for Road Death

A Victoria man was sentenced to two years less a day in prison for criminal negligence which caused the death of another man in a traffic accident June 4.

Donald G. Cole, 20, of 1010 Balmoral, had pleaded guilty June 14 and was sentenced in provincial court today by Judge Harold Alder.

The accident at Quadra and Johnson June 4 took the life of Bruce Jacobsen, 24, of 860 Royal Oak.

A Victoria policeman testified Cole and another man got into a fistfight at 11:22 p.m. June 4. As police approached, Cole got into his car and sped away at 45 m.p.h.

Cole, going north on Quadra, ran a red light and struck Jacobsen's car going east on Johnson. Jacobsen died in hospital two days after the accident.

Cole was also given a two years less a day indeterminate sentence on the criminal charge and a six-month concurrent sentence for breach of probation.

He had pleaded guilty June 14 to driving while under suspension at the time of the accident and to Kamloops RCMP charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

He was sentenced to a total of 30 days in jail for those offences.

Saanich Must Pay Contractor

An appeal against an arbitration award of $58,608, to be paid by Saanich to a local contractor, has been dismissed by B.C. Supreme Court.

Wheaton Construction Ltd. was contracted by Saanich in November, 1970, to build 3,500 feet of sewer on Glanford, west of Douglas, for $66,118.

Saanich had specified that firm grey clay was the prevalent soil throughout the pipeline route but Wheaton encountered a soft blue clay.

Wheaton completed the work and claimed $118,000 more for the extra work alleging the job specifications were misleading.

An arbitration, as provided for in the contract, found unanimously in Wheaton's favor and awarded $58,608 damages.

Saanich, represented by Louis Lindholm, asked Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane to set aside the arbitration award May 29.

Lindholm said the attack on the arbitration was based on the contention that the board had no jurisdiction, or that it exceeded its jurisdiction because it did not answer questions put forward by the parties.

"The arbitration clause in the contract constituted a 'written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration'," said Macfarlane.

"The parties formally submitted their dispute to arbitration when they appointed the members of the board . . . The board was, in my opinion, then clothed with jurisdiction to settle the dispute or difference which had arisen," he said.

Macfarlane ruled it was unnecessary for "specific questions to be agreed upon before a valid submission was before the board."

"The arbitration clause is in general terms, and there is no provision for questions to be formulated," as a condition precedent to jurisdiction," he said.

Whiz Kid Lures Fans

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — One of the most publicized schoolboy stars in baseball history makes his major league pitching debut tonight, and 18-year-old David Clyde will at least get the Texas Rangers his bonus money back even if he doesn't get a single Minnesota Twin out.

Clyde, who pitched nine no-hitters for Houston's Westchester High School, was paid a bonus believed in the neighborhood of $100,000. A record crowd of more than 32,000 will jam Arlington Stadium to see the left-hander's blazing fastball, and tickets averaging $3 apiece are making the Ranger front office happy.

"You know, in a way it's rather baffling that it has taken a high school phenomenon to fill this stadium," said Ranger Manager Whitey Herzog. "But that's the way Texans are— they'll pay to see a winner."

Clyde had a 52-13 career high school record and says he won't mind pitching in front of a huge crowd.

Herzog says no matter what happens Clyde "won't go nine innings even if he's pitching a shutout. Clyde hasn't pitched in 19 days and only thrown batting practice three times.

OBLIVIOUS of fanfare around him, 18-year-old David Clyde sits calmly in Texas Ranger dugout and practices bubblegum artistry. Sensational young hurler makes his first major league baseball start tonight. Clyde was top pick in amateur draft. See story on left. (AP Wirephoto)

One for the Road

Hustling Victoria Shamrocks upset the Western Lacrosse Association leading Vancouver Burrards in Vancouver Tuesday night and coach Ed Kowalyk is confident they can do it again tonight at Memorial Arena.

Shamrocks meet the Burrards at 8 tonight and Kowalyk said this morning he will go with the same lineup that scored a 14-8 victory Tuesday for the club's first win in eight away games.

"The boys played really well," Kowalyk said. "They did a lot of running and a lot of back-checking and this made all the difference."

Asked if he felt his club could pull off an upset for the second night in a row, Kowalyk said: "Sure. Vancouver has a good ball club, but if we run, if we get after the loose balls, we can beat them again."

Nirmal Dillon, who recently ended a short retirement, scored three goals, including his 200th in senior lacrosse, and Mike Beaulac and Ivan Thompson each added two.

Skip Chapman had another good night in goal for the Shamrocks, making 48 saves, including 13 in a hectic third period.

The win lifted the Shamrocks out of a last-place tie with New Westminster Salmonbellies and into third place, eight points behind second-place Coquitlam Adanacs and 10 points behind the Burrards.

New Faces Show

TORONTO (CP) — Many familiar faces will be missing when the 35-member United States team trots out for the Pacific Conference Games tonight and Thursday.

Missing are Steve Prefontaine, Rod Milburn, Steve Smith, Willie Davenport and Al Feuerbach — to name a few.

This doesn't mean anything to Dr. Terry Kavanagh of Toronto, president of the Games.

"At the first Games . . . the Americans promised to send up the most powerful team available, and I'm convinced they did.

"Many veteran stars were defeated at the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union meet recently by new, rising stars, who will be here."

★ ★ ★

One who deserves watching is Rick Wohlhuter of Chicago. He not only broke Jim Ryun's 880-yard world record May 27 in Los Angeles with a time of one minute 44.6 seconds, but also defeated Olympic gold medalist Dave Wottle during the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union meet in 1:45.6.

He should have an easy time in the 800-metre event at the Games, although he was beated in the 1972 Olympics by Graeme Rootham of Australia, one of nine entered in the race.

Others are Eric Chapman of Toronto and Ken Elmer of Burnaby, B.C. Elmer, who will also run in the 1,500 metres, became the third Canadian to break the four-minute mile with a time of 3:58.5, although he finished fifth in a race last week at Eugene, Ore.

★ ★ ★

Seven AAU champions, including four members of the 1972 U.S. Olympic team will compete. Besides Wohlhuter, they are Tom Hill, John Craft and Chris Dunn.

Herb Washington, who claims to be "the fastest man in the world indoors," will also compete as he continues his program to make believers of those who contend that he is not a good outdoor runner.

Washington, former Michigan State star now running for California International, holds the 50-yard indoor record with a time of 5.1 seconds, shares the 50-metre indoor mark at 5.6 and beat Olympic 100 and 200-metre champion Valery Borzov of Russia in the 100 metres at the U.S.-Soviet Union indoor meet at Richmond, Va., in March.

Following the Games, teams from the competing countries will continue their rivalry in five other Canadian cities, finishing the tour with a two-day met (July 7 and 8) in Victoria.

AARON HAS DOUBTS ABOUT THIS SEASON

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Henry Aaron doubts he will break Babe Ruth's major league career home run record this season.

"I will have to play too many games, and I'd be hurting not only myself but I don't think I'd be helping the team," said the Atlanta Braves' star.

"So I think I'll have to wait until next year, unless I can get hot in the second half of the season. If I can hit between 20 and 25 by all-star time, then I've got a chance to do it this year."

Aaron has hit 19 homers to date this season, and with 692, stands just 22 back of Ruth's record 714.

Aaron will be 40 early in 1974, and he said next year will be his last as a player.

Burnaby Puts an End To McDonald's Streak

No. 13 proved unlucky Tuesday night for Victoria McDonald's Bread.

For 12 straight games, the Victoria squad had confidently disposed of its oppenents in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League and led by 10 points.

But an under-manned McDonalds team couldn't get what it had together Tuesday and failed in its bid for the 13th straight win when second-place Burnaby Cablevision grabbed a 9-6 decision at Memorial Arena.

Goalkeeper Ted Gernaey played a big part in Burnaby's win, making 51 saves and holding Victoria scoreless for two long periods in the game.

McDonalds make life much easier for Gernaey with poor shooting most of the game.

The Bakers were without the services of Norm Baker, Mark Bowles and Mike Yager, through illness or injury and, although replacements Kevin Alexander, who scored three goals, and Bob Cool from the Pacific Junior "B" League played well, the team couldn't seem to click.

Although short-handed and playing well below their usual form, the Bakers were never right out of it, however, until Nick Delmonico scored his third goal in the last minute of the game.

Bakers twice pulled back to within one goal of their opponents in the third period—at 6-5 and again at 7-6—but defensive errors saw Burnaby's lead again increased to two goals on both occasions.

Glen Neuman, with two goals and Jerry Kustaski, with one goal, were the other McDonald scorers.

Decker's Prayer for Edge Produced 15 Strikeouts

By The Associated Press

The curveball and the fastball are a pitcher's most effective weapons. But then, it never hurts to look elsewhere for an extra edge.

Minnesota's Joe Decker looked . . . up.

"Before the game," said Decker after his 15 strikeout effort defeated Chicago White Sox 4-0 Tuesday night, "I prayed that I would have a decent performance. One that would get me started—get me going this season."

In other American League games, New York Yankees pummeled Cleveland Indians 10-2, Baltimore Orioles blanked Milwaukee Brewers 6-0, Detroit Tigers topped Boston Red Sox 4-1, Oakland Athletics beat Texas Rangers 6-2 and the California Angels edged Kansas City Royals 6-5.

Decker's strikeout total became the new American League high this season.

Decker pitched what he called "the greatest game I've ever pitched in the major leagues. For once I wasn't struggling."

At Fenway Park in Boston, the story of another accomplishment unfolded. It wasn't quite so dramatic, but that doesn't mean it was dull.

Two weeks ago, righthander Mike Strahler was on the Detroit Tigers' International League farm club, Toledo Mudhens. The parent team was in town for an exhibition, and Strahler pitched the last inning of the game.

So who strode to the plate, bat in hand, in that final inning but Tigers' Manager Bill Martin. "I wanted to see him for myself," Martin said.

"The next day," recalls Martin, "I brought him up."

And Tuesday night, Strahler pitched 8 2-3 innings of seven-hit ball to help defeat Red Sox and break the Tigers' eight-game losing streak. Gates Brown supplied the power with a run-scoring triple and two singles and Strahler did the rest, except for the final out, which was handled by John Hiller.

Strahler had pitched only 4⅔ innings of relief before the surprise start at Fenway, but Billy Martin was impressed by what he saw, and the youngster may have found a spot on the Tiger staff.

In the National League, a story in a Washington newspaper irked Del Unser and may have helped his career.

The Philadelphia outfielder had five hits, including two homers, in a twi-night doubleheader split with St. Louis Cardinals.

Unser, who was with Cleveland, read he'd been traded to Philadelphia and that his job wasn't going to be fulltime.

This irritated him enough to insist on starting. And the Cards felt the effects.

Out homer in the ninth inning of the second game tied things up before Cards won it 5-4 in the 11th.

Elsewhere in the league, Los Angeles Dodgers blanked San Diego Padres 7-0; Atlanta Braves humbled San Francisco Giants 9-2; Chicago Cubs beat New York Mets 5-1, Cincinnati Reds topped Houston Astros 5-1 and Montreal Expos stunned Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-3.

Unser, who was with Cleveland, read he'd been traded to Philadelphia and that his job wasn't going to be fulltime.

This irritated him enough to insist on starting. And the Cards felt the effects.

CFL Players Agree: All-Star Timing 'Fine'

HAMILTON (CP) — Any question about the timing of the annual Canadian Football League all-star game interfering with the general course of football business was dispelled Tuesday night.

Rival coaches of the CFL stars and the 1972 Grey Cup champions, Hamilton Tiger-Cats, agreed that the present format was to their satisfaction.

And George Reed, ace running back of Saskatchewan Roughriders and president of the CFL Players' Association, concurred, saying that if the game time was changed to immediately after training camp he probably wouldn't play.

"I wouldn't play at the end of training camp," the CFL's all-time ground gainer said during an informal gathering of coaches. "There are only three or four days to prepare for the first game after training camp breaks and I have to concentrate every moment.

"Now, we've got time to play the all-star game and think about the future."

Game time tonight is 8 o'clock EDT. It will be televised on the CTV network with Toronto-Hamilton area blacked out.

John Payne, new coach of the 'Riders, who became head coach of the all stars by virtue of Saskatchewan's 13-10 loss to the Ticats in last fall's national final, arrived here shortly before the news conference.

Former assistant with both Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Edmonton Eskimos, also of the Western Football Conference, Payne said "the best time for a game of this nature is now, before we get into the season."

Hamilton coach Jerry Williams said the game wasn't interfering with his training camp plans and Ralph Goldston, former Ticat and Montreal Alouette who is assisting the all star preparations, called the timing "excellent."

Payne's prime worry is whether the stars will have an adequate running game to take some of the pressure off Reed, whom he'll be relying on to carry the 'Rider payload during the season.

"It bothers me a great deal," said Payne of the circumstances. "We just may throw the ball a lot."

The all stars were left with Reed as the only regular running back when Mack Herron of Winnipeg Blue Bombers was dropped from the team after being charged with a drug offence, and Montreal's Ike Brown was sidelined with an injury.

Lions Trim Roster

Times News Service

The concentration of coaches swung to the tight end position as B.C. Lions continued to pare and to prepare for the Western Football Conference season.

Head coach Eagle Keyes "liked" the work of three imports vying for the tight end position.

Keyes singled out Arkansas grad Dick Bumpus as the most impressive performer, with John Turner of Long Beach State and Tom Lorenz of Iowa State "not far behind."

Lions, training at Penticton, reduced their roster to 58 this week with the dropping of six players, including import quarterback Clyde LeBaron. Others dropped were Canadian guards Steve Zsapka and Terry Sharpe, running back Cor Doret and import defensive ends Bob Brown and Ephriam Smiley.

Another player, rookie offensive back Robbie Allen of Lennozville, Que., left the camp for medical reasons. Allen, who visited a Vancouver physician earlier in the day suffering from a back injury recurring from college football, was advised to give up the game because of a disc pressing on a nerve.

Grand Prix Race Escapes Boycott

LONDON (AP) — The British Grand Prix, ninth event in the auto world racing championship, will be held July 14 as scheduled following an agreement on payments to competing teams.

Formula I teams had threatened to boycott the race if their demand for a $25,000 increase in prize money was not accepted.

Swingers' Catcher Hitting Almost .400

Times News Services

The girls' club has a new darling in Gerry Ryan, a catcher for the Swingers in a women's slow pitch softball league in Detroit.

She's 62.

Oh, she won't deny she's lost a step. The batting average is likely to slip below .400, and you can't always stretch those long singles into doubles when you get to be Gerry's age.

"I'm gonna keep playing as long as I can," she said.

Gerry plays regularly for the Swingers, one of the better teams in the league.

"I get a little overheated when it's warm. Otherwise, I can play all seven innings. They're afraid I'll get too tired, I guess."

New Jersey State athletic commissioner Abe Greene has ordered a rematch be held "within short order" between Ernie Terrell and Chuck Wepner, whose heavyweight battle Saturday ended in a disputed decision victory for Wepner.

Greene also said he is withholding recognition of Wepner as the U.S. heavyweight champion because of the dissent of newspaper men who covered the fight. The fight had been billed as being for the American heavyweight title.

"I want this cloud dispelled quickly, and I'm calling on Wepner, who is New Jersey heavyweight champion, and Terrell, former World Boxing Association champion, to get together at once to arrange for a return bout," Greene said.

The decision in the 12-round bout was made by the referee alone, as is customary under New Jersey boxing rules. Referee Harold Valan scored it 7-5 for Wepner.

Outdoor Fun Enhanced By Picking Right Gear

Choosing just the right equipment for your own particular blend of outdoor activities may determine, to a large extent, the pleasure gained from that pursuit and the amount of time you will devote to it in the future.

Poor selections often lead to bitter memories of trips gone sour and "for sale" items in the classified pages.

Since camping is central to most outdoor hobbies, particular care should be exercised in buying gear for this department. After about four years of shopping around, our own kit is now finally complete—at least for now.

We opted for a lightweight nylon tent as our main shelter. It serves double duty for backpacking and takes up little room in our small four-by-four.

Sheets of plastic, cut to size, are used for a groundsheet and "fly" over the tent. This combination has proved itself by keeping us dry in heavy rain, even once when a puddle collected under the floor.

★ ★ ★

By keeping equipment simple, and resisting the temptation to purchase all sorts of gadgets, we are able to pack and get going in a reasonably short time.

The down sleeping bags we invested in not too long ago have also proven dependable, keeping us snug even when the temperature has fallen enough to leave a quarter-inch thick layer of frost on the fly.

Foam pads, corrugated on the bottom to roll up into a tight roll when not in use, complete our sleeping gear. The foam also provides an essential layer of insulation against cold from the ground.

The wife and I decided early to go with propane for fueling our cooking and lighting gear. It was so reliable, easy-to-use and clean that a heater was later added to take the chill off some of those spring and fall mornings.

We have three refillable propane bottles, a five-pounder for the stove, and two smaller ones for the light and heater.

Our sink — a galvanized basin — is simple but gets the task done.

An item we carry most of the time now is a folding plastic five-gallon water container. The type we bought came from a plastic supply house and is far sturdier and easier to fill than the ones normally seen in department stores. This is enough water to last for a long weekend, even when there is no other supply.

★ ★ ★

Although we prefer a cast-iron frying pan, all our other pots are of the nesting aluminum variety, which heat up quickly and save propane.

Utensils, both for cooking and eating, are enclosed in a sectioned-off piece of plastic. This in turn is rolled up, with the utensils, and kept in a zippered container.

Sometimes, particularly in the early spring or fall, we enjoy the luxury of a rented hard-top tent trailer on our camping trips.

But even the tent trailer incorporates simplicity and ease of operation. Just crank it up, flop out the ends, and you're ready for the night.

This factor is especially welcome when you arrive at a wilderness campsite while it's raining at 1 or 2 a.m.

Unlike most, we've progressed from relatively complex camping arrangements to simpler gear.

We started off with a truck and rented a camper, built a camper into a Volkswagen van and then hit on the present arrangement.

True, this type of setup isn't for everyone. Each person has his own ideas on what is right for their own needs.

But that is precisely the crux of the matter — trying to fill those requirements without wasting time and money.

MARGARET COURT
... starts afresh

Billie Jean Doesn't Waste Time

LONDON (AP) — With her debacle at the hands of Bobby Riggs behind her, Margaret Court begins her bid for a second grand slam today at Wimbledon.

The top-seeded Mrs. Court, who won the Australian, French, Wimbledon and Forest Hills titles two years ago takes on fellow-Australian Karen Krantzcke.

Billie Jean King, who beat Mrs. Court here last year, had an easy time in her first match Tuesday, polishing off Lucia Bassia of Italy, 6-0, 6-2.

The 29-year-old star from Long Beach, Calif., had the first set of her second round match over in 12 minutes and lost only six points.

Chris Evert from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., defeated Fiorella Bonicelli of Uruguay 6-3, 6-3, while Rosemary Casals of San Francisco raced past Brenda Kirk 6-0, 6-1.

Virginia Wade, Britain's No. 1 player, had a scare from 16-year-old Australian lefthander Dianne Fromsholtz in the first set, but righted herself to win 3-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia, seeded No. 3, volleyed well to beat Betty Stove of the Netherlands 6-3, 6-3.

First-round American women winners included Judy Heldman of New York, Tory Ann Fretz of Los Angeles, Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego, Marita Redondo of National City, Calif., and Pam Teegarden of Los Angeles.

In the men's circuit, torn by the bdycott of the Association of Tennis Professionals, Roger Taylor of Britain, who was not among the 70 players who did not play, beat Harold Ensenbroich of West Germany in a second round match 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, seeded No. 2 behind Ilie Nastase, eliminated Pietro Marzano of Italy 6-0, 6-4, 6-3.

Bob McKinley of St. Ann, Mo., brother of 1963 champion Chuck McKinley, defeated Jun Kuki of Japan 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 in a second-round match.

In a first-round match, Pancho Walthall of San Antonio, Tex., beat Tadeusz Nowicki of Poland 6-4, 3-6, 6-8, 6-3, 6-2.

Vickie Berner of Vancouver, ranked No. 2 in Canada, took a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Mariana Simionescu of Romania in first-round competition.

Miss Berner, 30, has played in at Wimbledon for many years and in the final analysis her experience paid dividends against the young Romanian.

Another Vancouver player, Janice Tindle, lost 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 to Wendy Turnbull of Australia.

Miss Tindle, 22, qualified last week for her first championship event at Wimbledon. She played a serve-and-volley game superbly for seven games, and appeared to be well in control. But things began to go wrong.

First, she lost her service rhythm, then ground strokes became uncertain. With her momentum gone, the 20-year-old Australian won the other sets.

Brazilians Blank Young B.C. Side

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cruzeiro of Brazil turned on the pressure in the second half to defeat a youthful British Columbia side 2-0 in an exhibition soccer game Tuesday night.

The teams battled through a scoreless first half before Roberto opened the scoring. Lopes scored later in the half as Cruzeiro dominated play in the final 45 minutes.

The B.C. team, made up largely of players under 21 with a couple of additions, gave a good account in the opening half and enjoyed a good margin of the play.

The game was rough, with the crowd of about 6100 demonstrating unhappiness on a few occasions with the pushing tactics used by several of the visiting players.

Roberto got the first goal in the 13th minute of the second half when he picked up a loose ball after some erratic clearing by the B.C. defence. He dribbled round a couple of defenders and fired a curving shot that gave goalkeeper Greg Weber no chance.

Final goal came at 82 minutes with Lopes blasting a left-footed shot along the ground.

In the first half, B.C. enjoyed several excellent opportunities but could not hit the net after setting up well. The best chance came late in the half when Glen Johnson fired a low shot off the post.

Cedar Hill Enjoying Role in Driver's Seat

Cedar Hill could lose the final round tonight and still collect its first Willie Park Driver as champions of the Victoria District Inter-Club Golf League.

All they have to do is win at least three of the nine points up for grabs while visiting Royal Colwood.

After four of the five rounds, Cedar Hill leads with 28 points while defending-champion Gorge Vale trails in second spot, seven points behind.

Victory has so far eluded Cedar Hill after five years of competition in the 14-year-old league.

Labatts Cut Loose

Labatts, underdogs for much of the season, awakened with a vengence Tuesday night to upset Royal Oak Sporting Goods 11-2 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

In another Game, Six Mile House defeated CFB Esquimalt 7-2 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Labs, who were held to only one hit by Seaboard Construction in their last start, exploded for 13 hits en route to victory.

Skip Porteous paced Labs at the plate, getting three hits in three trips to the plate to score once and drive in three runs. Brian Calloway, Cec Ferguson and Terry Whitman, who scored twice and drove in two runs, all went two-for-three in batting.

Russ Carruthers picked up the pitching triumph by striking out four batters, allowing no base-on-balls and yielding six hits.

Six Mile had nine hits and took advantage of six CFB errors for the win.

Six of the league teams — Century Inn, Seaboards, Bell's Men's Wear, Labatts, Mike's Sport Shop and Six Mile House — will play host to a three-day double-loss elimination tournament starting Saturday.

Visiting squads include three teams from Port Alberni — Port Alberni Health Spa, Dolans and Beaufort Hotel — as well as Blarney Stone of Richmond, Seattle Martin Realty and Anchor Garage of Courtenay.

A Record-Shattering Year for Wilt

NEW YORK (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain has rewritten the National Basketball Association record book — again.

He personally accounted for 18 new marks in a season which produced 48 records with another 11 equalled, it was announced Saturday by NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy.

Chamberlain's field goal percentage of .727 during the campaign marked the first time an NBA player has hit more than 70 per cent of his shots for an entire season. It was also the ninth time in his 14-year NBA career that the veteran centre had topped the league in two-pointer accuracy.

Among Chamberlain's other marks, mostly extensions of his own career records, were 31,419 points scored, 47,859 minutes played, 12,681 field goals played and a 30.1 points a game average. In addition, the 36-year-old giant led the NBA in rebounds for the 11th time.

Nate Archibald of Kansas City-Omaha Kings set three season records — 910 assists, 14 straight games with 10 or more assists and 56 games with 10 assists or better. Milwaukee Bucks' Oscar Robertson added a trio of career entries — with 7482 free throws made, 9441 assists and a per-game assist average of 9.7.

English Salvage Draw

LONDON (AP-Reuter) — Keith Fletcher saved the second cricket Test for England with 178 in 379 minutes as the match with New Zealand ended in a draw Tuesday.

The 29-year-old batsman resisted New Zealand throughout the final day to preserve England's 1-0 lead in the series.

His score was his highest in test cricket and the best of the series. He prevented New Zealand from clinching its first triumph in 44 matches against England.

At one stage Tuesday, New Zealand appeared set for victory when three England wickets fell for only 17 runs in 20 minutes — two of them going to left-arm spinner Hedley Howarth who finished with four for 144.

Final scores: England 253 and 463 for nine; New Zealand 551 for nine declared.

Drug Test Dropped

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League players, steaming over reports that Commissioner Pete Rozelle might force them to take urine tests as a means of deterring drug abuse, have won a partial victory but it may be only temporary.

Rozelle said Tuesday the league has put off plans for such unprecedented testing of its athletes—but he stressed the idea is far from dead.

It is "still under consideration," he said, and may be resurrected for the 1973 season if legal problems regarding such a concept don't crop up and if the league's newest official, a medical consultant, yet to be appointed thinks it's necessary.

The appointment of an NFL medical consultant and the absence of urinalysis were highlights of a news conference in which Rozelle introduced new procedures to supplement the league's drug abuse program.

The new steps call in part for:

—Each player to notify his team physician of the nature of any prescription medication he takes that is obtained from sources other than the team;

—Each team to periodically submit to the league its inventory of prescription drugs and bills for prescription drugs;

—Each team to immediately report "any situation wherein one or more of the team's players, coaches, trainers or other personnel reportedly are involved in a drug incident;"

—Disciplinary action, including possible suspension from the league, against team personnel for improper disposition or use of drugs or failure to comply with the periodic reporting requirements;

—The league to expand its own drug educational programs.

The initial drug abuse program was put into effect two years ago.

Rozelle said that when he met with the NFL Players Association last weekend in Chicago, it agreed to go along with the aspects of the supplemental procedures relating to them, mainly the reporting of non-team-administered drugs.

But urinalysis is another matter.

The 26 team representatives in the NFLPA unanimously endorsed a resolution last Sunday rejecting "proposals lacking due process which would invade the privacy of gifted athletes and further violate individual rights and freedoms enjoyed by other citizens."

And a number of players, fuming over what they feel is the idea that they might be treated like race horses, say they're ready to seek legal counsel to fight urine testing.

Asked about players who might use marijuana or similar drugs on their own time, rather than drugs such as pep pills related to the game, Rozelle said the league "can't police drugs 24 hours a day.

"What we want to do is make every effort to eliminate or minimize the use of drugs in the NFL. . . . Society as a whole has problems with drugs, so we can't be exempt. We just don't know the size of it."

Farmers Enjoy 'Running Wild'

Farmer Construction, with the help of an opportunist runner, nipped Gorge Hotel 1-0 Tuesday at Lambrick Park to break a first-place deadlock between the two Victoria Senior Baseball League clubs.

Randy Johnson took advantage of a wild streak by loser Tom Holmes to score the lone run.

Johnson drew a base-on-balls and came around to score on three wild pitches.

Glen Campbell, who picked up his third victory without a loss this season, was locked in a pitching duel with Holmes. Both struck out six batters and gave up six hits.

Major Energy Problem: Emotion

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Emotionalism is the greatest single problem confronting Canada's energy industry, the incoming president of the Canadian Gas Association told the group's annual meeting today.

Vernon Horte, also president of Canadian Arctic Gas Study Ltd., said emotion must be abandoned "if we are to develop policies based on fact and designed to best serve the interests of our country."

This was particularly important if the soon-to-be-announced federal energy paper, an economic analysis on which a national energy policy is to be based, is to be of any use.

"There will be little point of ensuing discussions and debate unless we forget our emotional hang-ups and concentrate on the development of policies and actions which will best serve the needs of all Canadians."

Energy trade with the United States also needs a foundation of "fact and hard-headed realism."

"I will bow to no one in my fervor as a Canadian. But I thoroughly deplore the attitude which implies 'Whatever is good for the United States has to be bad for Canada.'

"This narrow, parochial, introverted type of nationalism will make us poorer Canadians, poorer materially and poorer intellectually.

". . . If we can obtain a net benefit from selling energy supplies which are surplus to our own requirements to the highest-priced energy market in the world, we would be foolish not to do so."

Canada's petroleum reserves are not in danger of being depleted so long as they are developed to become available as needed and "we continue to limit exports to volumes surplus to our own needs."

Supplies from remote areas such as the Arctic and offshore will have to be tapped by 1980, meaning that the cost of natural gas will go up. However, these supplies will be cheaper than imports and will not require foreign expenditures.

"Canada's trading partners will be strapped with energy costs that are just as high if not higher," giving this country a net trading advantage.

"I think we get so hung up on the short-term problems and higher energy costs that we tend to completely lose sight of the longer-term and more important considerations."

A text of Mr. Horte's speech was released in advance of delivery.

AIR ROUTE NEGOTIATIONS RESUME JULY 16 IN U.S.

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Transport Minister Jean Marchand said Tuesday that the vitally important bilateral air route negotiations between Canada and the United States will be resumed July 16. They will be held in Washington.

The talks broke down a month ago in Ottawa over the question of customs preclearance for U.S. airlines.

The Canadian airlines want to press for new routes into the United States for Canadian carriers. These would include new routes south across the borden from Winnipeg, Vancouver, Calgary and Toronto.

However the American government is miffed at the termination by Canada of the customs preclearance at Canadian airports for U.S. airlines. The U.S. has asked for a two months extension of the July 1 deadline for ending the preclearance operations.

The Americans indicated that they would want a favorable response from the Canadian government before resuming the talks.

Asked Friday outside the house if the Canadian government has a reply to give the American government on preclearance Marchand smiled and said, "I don't know, I hope we'll have something to tell them on preclearance."

SENATORS HUSTLE VETS' PENSION HIKE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate whisked through first, second and third readings Tuesday of a government bill to increase the basic pension of a totally disabled war veteran by $910 a year.

The increase, which will apply proportionately to all other categories of disabled veterans as well as to their dependents, wives and widows, is expected to receive royal assent before the end of June and go into effect July 1.

Senator Orville Phillips (PC—Prince Edward Island) commended the improvements to the Pension Act, which will increase the basic annual disability pension to $4,704 from the $3,793 set down in 1971. But he objected to pegging the new rates to the average salary, after income tax, of the five lowest categories of public servants.

"I'm not proud of the fact that a 19-year-old can go down and join a union and receive $200 a week . . . while you're offering our veterans $98 a week."

Deadly Fare

VANCOUVER (CP) — Traditional native Indian and Eskimo delicacies may be the source of a number of cases of deadly botulism in Canada, a specialist in the disease said Tuesday.

Dr. E. J. Bowmer, specialist at British Columbia Laboratories, the botulism reference centre of Canada, said Indians and Eskimos should be discouraged from making "stink eggs and other delicacies by methods that have proved dangerous."

He told ameeting of Canadian pathologists and microbiologists here that some traditional Indian recipes, including "stink eggs" made from salmon eggs, are potentially dangerous and may cause botulism.

Deputy-Minister Attacks 'Idiots in Indian Affairs'

TORONTO (CP) — John Ciacia, deputy minister of Indian Affairs, said Tuesday that power-hungry Indian politicians and "idiots in the Indian affairs department who hate Indians" might sabotage an $800,000 program designed to help young people on reserves.

The program, which begins next month, has been criticized by Indian leaders who object to "outsiders" on reserves and by Indian affairs personnel who complain the program is riddled with radicals.

One department official, who refused to be named, said the department has hired at inflated prices "lids without skills, largely Company of Young Canadians' types, Wounded Knee sympathizers and university students who know little about the problems of Indians."

Mr. Ciacia said in an interview this is "moronic."

"This is what happens every time we try to do anything new in this department.

"I get the backlash from the idiots in the department who hate Indians and I also get it from the Indian band politicians who see anything we do as a threat to their own power base."

He said the department has hired 33 youth workers—28 Indians, four whites and one black—at salaries between $10,000 and $11,000 each on a one-year contract.

They will travel to reserves "to determine the problems of young Indians and suggest solutions which can be tied into existing programs."

"They are young and eager, and while it may be true that they sometimes get overeager and go barging on a reserve to talk to people without arranging it with the chief first, they are definitely not radicals."

Meteorites Come To Canada Through Trades

By ALLAN BARTLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Harold Steacy is caretaker of the only extra-terrestial property Canada is likely to lay claim to in the forseeable future.

He is curator of minerals for the Geological Survey of Canada and as such is responsible for the care and cataloguing of Canada's National Meteorite Collection.

The collection now has about 350 meteorite specimens collected from around the world, but only about 30 were found in Canada. The others have been obtained by exchange with other countries or from commercial sources.

"It's just like trading stamps, in a way," said Dr. Steacy as he described the growth of the collection in an interview.

"Naturally, we are particularly interested in Canadian meteorites." To stimulate interest, the government offers a minimum $100 reward for anyone turning in a new meteorite to researchers.

The minimum reward is $100 but it can go higher depending on the type of meteorite offered.

SALES NEGOTIATED

"The price is something that is reached by discussion with the owner," said Dr. Steacy.

Commercial sales of meteorites are possible but Dr. Steacy said he knows of no firms handling such sales in Canada.

Judging from the last 10 years, there is not likely to be anything akin to a gold rush atmosphere in the search for meteorites.

Since 1963, the Geological Survey has had only 11 genuine meteorites turned in to it by the public. This, said Dr. Steacy, is from an average of 25 specimens a year sent in for identification.

Dr. Steacy said the largest number of samples come from Alberta, Saskatchewan and southern Ontario. He explains this by the high population of southern Ontario and the number of farmers working Western fields who might notice something unusual about a rock.

He says most specimens come from farmers and amateur geologists. "The finding of a meteorite is, in most cases, a very chance thing," said Dr. Steacy.

SUMMER BEST TIME

Sightings of meteor falls are most frequent during April to July and sink to a low between October and March.

Dr. Steacy attributes the fluctuations to more people being outside at night during warm weather.

TV ECLIPSE CUT

GENEVA (Reuter) —A planned worldwide live television broadcast of a total eclipse of the sun next Saturday has been cancelled because a mobile ground station needed for the operation is no longer available, the European Broadcasting Union (EBU) said here Monday.

It had been planned to fly the mobile earth station to an observation site on the shores of Lake Rudolph in northern Kenya to feed pictures and sound to a satellite over the Atlantic for world distribution.

But the station now is committed to the Skylab space mission, and efforts to make alternative arrangements were dropped because they would have been to expensive.

Early Bronchitis Diagnosis Discovered

CALGARY (CP) — A 10-year study of veterans with chronic bronchitis, a lung condition related to smoking, has shown it is possible to detect changes that will lead to serious disease early in adult life — around age 30.

Dr. D. V. Bates of Vancouver, a medical professor at the University of British Columbia, said his recently-completed study offers "a new rationale for early detection programs."

The study, which followed a group of 216 men for a 10-year period in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, showed that family doctors using special tests could predict which of the men would get serious disease.

A screening program of the total adult population would reveal the 10 per cent with the disease in early stages, he said.

Once these were identified, prevention programs could be launched.

In his address to a meeting of the Canadian Thoracic Society, the medical section of the Canadian Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, Dr. Bates said men in the Winnipeg part of the study did not show as great an increase in the lung disease as those in other centres.

This may be related to other studies which show that Winnipeg has less air pollution than the other three cities, he said.

Earlier, Dr. Stefan Grzybowski of Vancouver told delegates tuberculosis still is a major health problem, especially among developing nations and in groups which include Canadian Eskimos and Indians.

Eskimos have a rate of 447 cases per 100,000 compared with 14 cases per 100,000 population generally, and Canadian Indians of 136 per 100,000.

BANDITS WORE BOWLERS

LONDON (Reuter) — Three bowler-hatted bandits jumped on an elderly diamond dealer in the street Tuesday and got away with uncut gems worth an estimated $25,000, police reported.

The three men attacked William Turner, 70, in the Hatten Garden jewel centre. It was near the same spot where he was attacked about a year ago—but that time the would-be thieves fled empty-handed.

The three robbers, wearing smart suits and carrying briefcases, looked like respectable businessmen as they strolled toward their victim.

Dungeon Image Missing In Girls' Reformatory

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — The Vanier Centre for Women was opened in 1969 to replace the 89-year-old dungeon known as the Mercer reformatory in Toronto. Vanier is also a prison—but that's about as far as the similarities go.

A visitor to the Vanier Centre probably has the impression he's in a middle-class boarding school rather than a correctional centre.

There are no bars or high fences, little apparent security and no regulation uniform.

The prisoners—known here as residents—are mostly under 25. Of the 110 currently serving detention periods, a third are teen-agers.

Each resident has her own room in a "cottage" which houses 24. Part of the day is spent in a school environment, part doing housework. Nearly all the residents enjoy their time at Vanier.

"If you obey the rules and don't break anything, this is a pretty good place," one said.

Among the scores of differences between Vanier and the Mercer reformatory is the elimination of many de-humanizing aspects of institutional life at Vanier, says its deputy superintendent, Mike Byrd.

SUPERVISORS LIVE IN

"We are a therapeutic community here and that's the design of the place," said the bearded, 35-year-old Byrd. "The most important dimension of the centre's philosophy is helping people develop meaningful relationships with other people."

Each cottage has a supervisor who lives in during her shift on duty and develops relationships with each resident.

One supervisor at Vanier, Joyce Porter, says that staff have to balance on a tightrope when forming friendships with the residents.

"Staff have to be careful not to let the residents become too dependent on them emotionally," Joyce said. "Some of them have never known a decent mother and will latch onto a mother image."

The one common denominator of all the residents is their backgrounds.

"After a while you just stop reading their social histories," Rhoda Weltman, program co-ordinator, said. "They're all the same. They've all come from deprived backgrounds—socially, culturally and emotionally."

Each cottage has a council to deal with minor problems and voice suggestions by residents for changes in Vanier policy. One such change was the introduction of more informal visits with friends and relatives.

Residents are, however, searched after such visits to check for money or drugs.

Mr. Byrd says the centre has had an exceptional success rate with its program. In addition to being able to upgrade their schooling, residents may learn hairdressing, industrial sewing, cooking and dry cleaning.

The women are serving terms for offences ranging from manslaughter to theft. Some are tough, anti-social individuals; others made one mistake.

One 19-year-old resident, detained on fraud, theft and drug charges, says she won't do time in Vanier again.

She likes to be alone and complains of the community atmosphere of the centre.

"The next time, she said, "I'll ask the judge for more time so I can go to a federal penitentiary."

Tough Drug Stance Defended

Greater Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce said today it will not tone down its proposed drug control brief to the federal government.

The chamber has received criticism from some Vancouver Island aldermen and chamber officials that the recommendations would put too much power in the hands of police.

Two proposals that met opposition were that police be allowed to tap telephones of suspected drug traffickers and no bail be allowed for suspects in drug trafficking cases.

In defending its proposals, the chamber said:

"A society that places privilege above obligation, permissiveness above responsibility and the rehabilitation of the criminal above the protection of society, is a society on the road to disaster."

The chamber sent out advance copies of its brief to municipal councils, school boards and chambers on the Island and said the majority of responses so far have favored the proposals.

In cases where there was criticism, the chamber had not received any arguments that have convinced it that the brief should be toned down.

"No one wants to place extreme power in the hands of the police," the Nanaimo chamber said today in a release defending its proposals.

"However, at a time when those engaged in industrial espionage and criminal activities make use of every technical device available to aid them in their operations, (the public) seems reluctant to give the police the legislation, staff, equipment and electronic gear necessary for the efficient prosecution of those persons who co-ordinate the cultivation, manufacture, importation, distribution or traffic in illegal drugs."

The police should be at least as well armed and equipped as the criminals, the chamber argued.

The chamber brief says the only way to solve the growing drug problem is a get-tough approach.

It urges stronger sentences for selling heroin, up to and including the death penalty for repeated offences.

A key recommendation is for more police for drug squad work equipped with broader powers of search and surveillance, including wiretapping.

The chamber says drug traffickers are given a virtual blank cheque to operate because of the small number of police available to combat their activities.

The chamber brief deals only with the hard drug trade and says it has excluded the sale of marijuana from its terms of reference.

AGE OF PIPE NOT LINKED TO JASPER OIL SPILL

EDMONTON (CP)—An oil spill of up to 1,000 gallons inside the eastern gate of Jasper National Park cannot be attributed directly to the fact that the pipe was more than 20 years old, a spokesman for Trans-Mountain Oil Pipeline Co. said Tuesday.

Gerry Gorman said the durability of the pipe is partially dependent on the ground that surrounds it. Under ideal conditions, the steel used in the pipe could last up to 40 years, he said.

The company is trying to determine the cause of the spill while a crew of about 20 men continue to clean up. The company says the spill, caused by a four-inch crack at the base of the pipe, started Saturday about 150 yards from the Athabasca River. The pipeline carries oil from Edmonton to British Columbia and the United States.

Protest Craft in N-Test Zone

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (UPI) — A U.S. yacht and a ketch from New Zealand have entered the French nuclear test zone in the South Pacific to demonstrate opposition to atomic tests in the atmosphere, a spokesman for the protesters said today.

The 50-foot U.S.-registered yacht Fri, skippered by David Moodie of Rochester, N.Y., will remain in the area around Mururoa atoll, 800 miles southeast of Tahiti, at least two or three days, the spokesman said.

The crew of the Fri consists of Moodie, his wife, Emma, who is five months pregnant, and Petuchouli Yates, 23, of New Zealand, the spokesman said.

The other boat, the 40-foot New Zealand ketch Spirit of Peace, is skippered by Bernard Rhodes of Lancashire, England.

A spokesman for the group protesting French nuclear tests said the Spirit of Peace crew had exhausted most supplies and was down to baked beans and flour and two cups of water a day.

In Auckland, preparations continued today aboard the New Zealand navy frigate Otago, which is scheduled to sail Thursday for Mururoa atoll carrying New Zealand cabinet minister Fraser Colman as the country's official protester.

Wives Talk as Rocks Fly

SANTIAGO (AP) — Wives of striking copper miners marched on the Chilean capital Tuesday and met with President Salvador Allende. Outside, police and thousands of demonstrators fought with rocks and tear gas.

The Marxist president talked for more than an hour in the Moneda presidential palace with 10 of 500 women who came to the capital.

One of the women, Maria Cuella, said later the government promised to issue a statement within 48 hours regarding demands by the miners at the giant El Teniente copper mine for higher wages.

The arrival of the wives attracted thousands of youthful supporters, including organized groups from anti-Marxist opposition parties. Some of the demonstrators wore plastic helmets and carried bamboo staves.

The youths shattered the windows of a bank, and the police fired tear gas into the swarming crowd.

The situation downtown became confused as unidentified persons began throwing debris from office and commercial buildings. Huge traffic jams clogged the downtown area.

There apparently were groups of leftists also operating in the area, throwing rocks at the other demonstrators.

BIG BLAST AIDS TANKER SALVAGE

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — A Singapore salvage company has split a giant half-sunken oil tanker in two with a massive explosion and recovered the stern section and its valuable machinery.

The tanker, the 62,300-ton Italian-owned Igara, was sliced in half Tuesday by a belt of explosives strung around the hull and triggered electronically.

It was believed to be the first such operation in the world.

The Igara hit an uncharted rock off the coast of southern Malaysia in March during a voyage from Brazil to Japan. All the crew members were rescued.

A spokesman for the salvage firm said today the 400-foot stern section, worth an estimated $17.5 million, was towed to Singapore by tugs. The 600-foot bow section has sunk.

Sharp's Son Wins In School Furore

BROOKS, Alta (CP) — The demonstrators and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's son left in triumph.

About 100 students and parents jammed the Nowell County school trustees office Tuesday to oppose what they called a "punitive transfer" of Bassano school teacher Noel Sharp to Springside Hutterite colony.

The trustees had called Sharp, 20, of Bassano, in the northwest section of the county, a "trouble-maker" in the school and said he would be transferred to the colony, also in the county.

The trustees had ordered the transfer on grounds that Sharp, did not have a good working relationship with Percy Collins, principal of the school.

Sharp also refused to sign a retraction prepared for him by the school superintendent. He had written to newspapers attacking the way the trustees use educational funds and made an appeal before the trustees Tuesday against the transfer, demanding a full explanation.

"When a man's professional career is at stake I think the reasons should be given to the accused."

His supporters presented a petition signed by 390 of Bassano's 800 residents opposing the transfer. They said Sharp has been a good teacher and is not in their opinion a trouble-maker.

Bassano mayor Dick Plumber also told the trustees that his town council opposed the transfer.

Rent Set At $5,800

Saanich municipality will rent its social services offices on Vernon Ave. to the province for $5,800 a year, if council approves a recommendation passed Tuesday by its social services committee.

Committee members agreed the lease should be studied five years after the province assumes responsibility for social services September 1.

Committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning said the rental proposal was based on the portion of the building used, "reduced by the fact that the province gave a $17,000 capital grant for construction of the building."

Blind Seek Right to Work

HALIFAX (CP) — One of the major tasks of the Blind Rights Action Movement (BRAM) is convincing the sighted that a blind person can fit into the work world and has a right to do so, says Gary Grant, co-ordinator of the movement's latest project.

BRAM was formed three years ago as an activist group that would be organized by the blind themselves as a self-help measure, says Mr. Grant, who has less than 10 per cent vision and total color blindness.

The group's latest venture, simply called Project to Employ the Blind, began last year with establishment of a workshop training project that currently employs 16 blind and semi-sighted persons.

"The idea behind the workshop is to give blind people a chance to learn skills while discovering that they can work productively in society," says Mr. Grant.

"Among the employees are recently-blinded young adults who are trying to make the difficult transition—from living with sight to living productively with little or no sight at all."

WORK AT HANDICRAFT

The group, both men and women, produce a variety of handicraft goods as the first stage in acquiring manual skills that will help them find a place in the working world.

They concentrate at first on producing leather goods, hooked rugs, quilts, candles, jewelry and nylon buoys for underwater sonar equipment.

"The people working on the sonar buoys are in most cases recently-blinded people who have only lately returned to work," Mr. Grant says. "Their work in the shop gives us a chance to assess their abilities before we advise them what type of work would be best-suited for them."

While Mr. Grant and his officials are sure that the workshop can produce high-quality merchandise and competitive prices, there is a problem of marketing.

"We would like to set up some sort of retail outlet for our products, but at this stage we just don't have the resources to do that."

SALES LIMITED

Sales are currently confined to a small display area in the lobby of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind building here.

"Unless we can develop a marketing program, the long-term outlook for the workshops is not good."

However, work on that problem is continuing.

Besides the workshops, BRAM is also using federal funds to operate a transcription service that produces braille reading material for the community.

Two transcription teams, each made up of a reader and braille transcriber, are currently producing braille material for the Halifax School for the Blind.

In the last year, the teams have transcribed textbooks, as well as plays and novels used in high school English courses.

Coup Made on Loan

By EUAN STACE

MBABANE, Swaziland (AP) — King Sobhuza's subjects still barter brides and cattle, but the elderly monarch recently discovered the idea of instalment buying.

Sobhuza, 73, seems to have used it secretly to raise and equip an army in this small country which is surrounded by South Africa and the Portuguese territory of Mozambique.

While his politicians were proceeding according to the rules of a British-style constitution Sobhuza persuaded his pay-later army to stage a palace coup in April and assumed absolute power.

It was only after the coup and the arrest of five opposition members of Parliament that the nation learned where the military men came from.

The government announced the budget for the coming year and it showed a defence provision equivalent to $1.42 million.

Informants here say Sobhuza's credit supplier was South Africa, the arms and equipment were British and a team of Israeli instructors showed the recruits—estimated to number anywhere between 300 and 1,000—how to use them.

THWARTED BY COURT

Accounts making the rounds here say that Sobhuza, who took the throne more than 50 years ago, became irked by the actions of a small opposition party led by Thomas Ngwenya.

Sobhuza tried to have Ngwenya declared foreign-born and therefore liable to deportation. But the High Court would not go along. The king then scrapped the constitution and put Ngwenya and his colleagues in jail.

So now the king's ruling Imbokodvo, or Grinding Stone, party has followed the majority of black African states into one-party government. The coup was bloodless, but the goings-on have disturbed the tiny mountain kingdom.

"We don't talk about it even among ourselves," said a hotel receptionist when asked about the coup.

The government's policy of buying back the country from foreign owners has proceeded quietly and successfully. At independence in 1968, foreigners, most of them South Africans, owned more than 60 per cent of the land of the former British territory. Swazis now own about 52 per cent of their own country. But Sobhuza and his advisers know they can't go too far or too fast.

Landlocked Swaziland lives on exports of iron ore and agriculture and revenue from South African tourists.

New Face For TV's Mason

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seemed inevitable that television in its insatiable hunger for successful formulas would return to one of the most successful of all time—Perry Mason.

Perry Mason, which ran for nine years on CBS and probably will run forever in syndication, is being revised, revamped and recycled for the fall season.

The Erle Stanley Gardner creation, a lawyer who never loses a case—at least not on the air, will be played by Monte Markham. Markham left the Broadway production Irene after winning out over 300 other actors in a nine-month talent hunt. The other parts are still being cast.

Ernie Frankel, who is co-producer of the show with Art Seid, professes not to be concerned that Canadian-born actor Raymond Burr may be indelibly stamped in the minds of most viewers as Perry Mason.

"With all due respect for Ray, he did not create Perry Mason—Erle Stanley Gardner did," said Frankel, who was story consultant the last year of the old series.

"I think what Monte Markham will bring to the role is an interpretation of Gardner's work for 1973."

CONCEPT UNCHANGED

In structure the show will be the same. There will be no tampering with that. Mason, aided by Della Street and Paul Drake, will confront District Attorney Hamilton Burger and Lieut. Tragg in the courtroom climax. His client will be wrongly accused of murder and each week Mason will sift through the clues to determine the real killer.

"We're going to preserve the Gardner concept," said Frankel. "He was the most successful mystery writer in the world. That formula works.

"But this is 1973 and if Gardner were alive today he would be the first to say let's make it real. . . . Mason will be a contemporary figure."

In the original series Della spent most of her time answering the telephone. She will be a little more liberated now, serving as an assistant to Mason.

Heinz Salad Cream.

English Dressing

If you've ever been to England, you know Heinz Salad Cream. And you'll be delighted to know you can buy it here, too.
Heinz Salad Cream tastes rather like very good homemade salad dressing but just a bit creamier. Its delicately rich taste is perfectly delightful on lettuce wedges, tomato slices or hard boiled eggs. And the smooth, light texture blends beautifully in cabbage, potato, waldorf, seafood and meat salads or brings a subtle brightness to flavour sandwich fillings, dips, hot salads and casseroles.
Really, you can use Heinz Salad Cream just as you would an ordinary salad dressing. Indeed, you may find as the English have, that you prefer it.

Growers Predict Tobacco Boom

By DAVE AGNEW

TILLSONBURG, Ont. (CP) — Tobacco growers, with last spring's devastating frost still etched strongly in their memories, are in the midst of planting the largest crop ever to help meet an apparent insatiable worldwide appetite for tobacco.

It was June 11, 1972, that a killer frost wiped out about 90 per cent of the southwestern Ontario tobacco crop estimated to produce 200 million pounds.

Fortunately, the frost happened relatively early in the planting season which left growers enough time to pull and replant nearly all existing greenhouse stocks.

At season's end, growers produced about 165 million pounds of which about 55 million pounds were exported. The original aim was to send about 80 million pounds abroad.

The production slump, coupled with poor crops in other parts of the world, contributed to a worldwide shortage at a time when consumption is increasing at 150 million pounds a year, said George Demeyere, for 11 years chairman of the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Growers Marketing Board. Mr. Demeyere was defeated in a recent election for chairman.

Canada now is in a close race with India for second place behind the United States in the world's tobacco production race.

GUARANTEE IN ADVANCE

Ontario grows 95 per cent of all Canadian tobacco, and Norfolk County, southeast of London, produces 45 per cent of the Ontario crop.

The marketing board recently agreed to terms with the Tobacco Manufacturers Council, representing four companies, on a guaranteed price and production quotas for the 1973 and 1974 tobacco crop.

Mr. Demeyere said the agreement, providing 72.5 cents-a-pound guarantee plus one cent for export development, is a milestone for growers.

It involves a two-year production quota of 500 million pounds split evenly each year.

"It was a milestone to achieve a guarantee that covers the entire crop before it is planted," said Mr. Demeyere. The intent is to export 90 million pounds the first year, the largest amount ever.

"It provides us with a real opportunity to establish our blends of tobacco in world markets never before enjoyed," he said.

Canadian tobacco is marketed in 40 countries, the largest customer being the United Kingdom. Smaller orders have been sold to the Peoples Republic of China and to Japan.

If there is an overseas market, it depends on people like Andrew Zei, a Norfolk County grower, who remembers last year's frost and a 1960 hail storm that wiped out his entire crop.

"Sometimes I feel like getting out of the business," he says. "But then planting starts and then the excitement around harvest time and it seems to make it all worthwhile."

The harvest also poses problems for tobacco growers.

Getting the help and keeping them is a constant source of worry. Mr. Zei brought in eight helpers last year of about 30,000 people who worked in the harvest.

Canada Manpower is the largest source of help and last year placed 6,000 workers in the area, many coming from Quebec and the Maritimes and about 300 from the United States.

But to get the help, the growers must guarantee six weeks employment and $20 a day plus room and board. They also must pay for transportation.

COSTS MOUNT

Mr. Zei says production costs alone have risen during the last few years to about $450 an acre compared with $100. Labor takes the largest chunk.

He says he paid about $12,000 last year for help and accommodation costs. Mrs. Zei, who does the cooking during harvest, prepares a menu that includes home cooked pastries and the best of meat.

FOUR SECONDS, and numerous charges of high explosive, were all that was needed to reduce this building to a pile of rubble. The building, in Waterloo, Iowa, was demolished to make room for an urban renewal project.

Deluxe Baked Chicken Salad

Salad? . . . Casserole? Actually, this dish is both. Made with typical salad ingredients, it gets a quick warm up in the oven. And the results make this even more appealing and flavourful. Something a little different in salads.

2 cups cut-up cooked chicken
1 cup sliced celery
¼ cup French dressing
1 cup halved green grapes
⅓ cup toasted slivered almonds
½ pint dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon rosemary
French fried onion rings

Marinate chicken and celery in French dressing for 1 hour; drain if necessary. Preheat oven to 325°F. Combine chicken mixture, grapes and almonds. Blend together sour cream, flour, mustard, salt and rosemary; pour over chicken mixture and toss lightly. Place mixture in a 1¼-quart casserole. Bake in preheated oven about 25 minutes. Sprinkle with French fried onion rings and return to oven for 3 to 5 minutes until heated through. Serve immediately. Makes 4 or 5 servings.

Care of Frozen Foods From The Store to Home Freezer

Did you know that from the time a package of frozen food is taken from the freezer at the store until it is placed in the freezer at home, the care or lack of it, will determine the quality of the product? The greatest threat to frozen food is the rising of the temperature above zero. The higher the temperature of the frozen food, the greater the chance for discolouration and loss of quality and nutritive values. Taking the following precautions will help prevent excessive temperature changes:

- ★ Leave frozen food until the last when shopping
- ★ If available, use insulated bags for frozen food
- ★ Store frozen food in the home freezer as soon as possible. Avoid letting parcels sit in a heated car or on a kitchen counter.
- ★ The 'squeeze' test is not reliable for frozen food. Many packages will feel frozen hard at 15 to 20 degrees F, but although foods will not spoil at these temperatures, the quality and condition can be affected.

Clean Car Exhaust 'Costly' in Fuel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1976 U.S. federal clean air standard for reducing oxides of nitrogen from automobile exhausts could result in cars that use 20 per cent more fuel, auto makers told the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

In testimony before the federal agency, both Ford and Chrysler executives said they have no system now that could meet the standard and asked for a one-year delay while Congress examines the Clean Air Act of 1970.

The fuel consumption could be as high as 20 per cent more than that of 1973 models because of the need to further reduce emissions of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide from 1975 levels, said Sydney Terry, Chrysler vice president for environmental and safety regulations.

"It appears that the control of nitrogen oxide emissions, combined with extreme control of hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide, extracts a disproportionate fuel penalty," said Herbert Misch, vice-president of the Ford environmental and safety engineering staff.

"Even if cars meeting the 1976 nitrogen oxide standard could be manufactured, the fuel penalties associated with such vehicles would add to the growing energy crisis and the component costs involved could deter new car purchases to the extent that overall vehicle emission standards would not be reduced," he said.

Israeli Equality Tagged Myth

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION family

By TERENCE SMITH

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Is there a need for women's liberation in Israel, where women are drafted into the army, work in the fields alongside men and where a woman serves as premier?

Yes, say an increasing number of Israeli women, arguing that the much-advertised notion of sexual equality in Israel is more myth than reality.

"We have been brainwashed by our own legends of pioneering equality," says Shulamit Aloni, a writer, lawyer, former member of Parliament and feminist who is married and has three sons. "The equality that generally prevailed when the state was founded 25 years ago has been replaced by a bourgeois, middle-class sexism."

Although it is still a fledgling movement, women's liberation is reflected in small groups that have sprung up recently in all of Israel's larger cities and towns. The women have staged demonstrations against the "Miss Israel" beauty contest, started letter-writing campaigns protesting discrimination in the mass media and have published booklets calling for abortion reform and revamping of the religious laws governing marriage and divorce.

One group, made up mostly of English-speaking immigrants, began holding consciousness-raising sessions in Jerusalem three months ago. "We've been swamped by Israelis wanting to join," said a representative of that group, Judy Goldman, a 30-year-old blonde, who is originally from Montreal.

In the ruling Labor party, headed by Premier Golda Meir, an angry group of women leaders threatened earlier this month to boycott the fall elections unless women were given at least 25 per cent of the places on the party's list of candidates.

The active feminists in Israel, probably no more than several hundred, have made other Israelis, men and women, reconsider the assumption that women have more equal rights here. The result has been a rash of newspaper and television articles, television specials and university symposia on the status of women.

No consensus has emerged. The Israeli men interviewed at random on a recent television special all ridiculed the need for a women's lib movement — and most of the women on the program agreed. Only one or two suggested that there was room for improvement.

The chief complaints of Israeli feminists include the following:

The average full-time yearly income of the Israeli woman, according to research by Shulamit Aloni, the writer, is 42 to 67 per cent of the Israeli man's, depending on the field — despite a national law requiring equal pay for equal work.

Few women hold top jobs in the larger Israeli public corporations or national utilities — most of those jobs, in fact, are filled by former generals.

Other than Mrs. Meir, only seven women sit in the 120-member Knesset, or Parliament, and none are on its two most influential committees. No other women serve as ministers or deputy ministers. No woman ever has been elected a mayor or deputy mayor of any large town.

There is no civil marriage or divorce in Israel. All such matters are in the province of the rabbinical courts. A woman may not appear as a witness in her own divorce proceeding, nor may she initiate the divorce. If can only be granted with the consent of the husband.

In the view of Shulamit Aloni, the erosion of the original equality of the sexes in Israel is part of the general trend toward a more bourgeois style of life here. "We have retreated from the social revolution launched by the pioneers," she said, "and replaced it with lip service to equality."

In her view, a more significant factor has been the expanding influence of the Orthodox religious elements that have played a key role in the last several coalition governments, thus managing to get their way in many social matters.

"In the eyes of the religious," she said, the woman's place is in the home raising children. "It's very patriotic in this country to have a lot of children," she went on angrily.

She is fully aware that she is in the minority, that most Israeli women reject her views and profess to be happy with their lot. "Of course they are," she says scornfully. "Parasitism is addictive, didn't you know?"

Overexercise Can Harm Kidneys

VANCOUVER (CP) — A physically unfit person should not push himself into exhausting exercise if he values his kidneys — and his life, Dr. Norman Hollenberg of Harvard Medical School told the Canadian Anaesthetist's Society meeting here.

Hollenberg said physically unfit persons should go through progressive training under supervision first. Exercise too rigorous, he said, can reduce the blood flow to the kidneys and redirect it, reducing filtration of the blood for impurities.

Another warning note came from Dr. William Hryniuk of the department of medicine, University of Manitoba, who said aspirin (ASA), tranquilizers, anti-inflammatory agents, local anesthetics, antibiotics and perhaps caffeine and alcohol reduce the ability of the blood to clot.

He said two "baby aspirin" taken by an adult man were shown to affect his blood as long as 10 days after he swallowed them.

But these laboratory tests, Hryniuk said, should not be taken to mean that everyone swallowing aspirin bleeds to death, because of course they don't. He said aspirin is "one of the most valuable drugs we have." And this particular side effect can be easily corrected.

He said it's advisable for blood donors to say if they've just taken any of the drugs.

"A recent study shows that blood from donors who have taken aspirin contains platelets (corpuscles used in clotting) which do not function normally," he said.

HEALTH PLAN FOR ANIMALS

TORONTO (CP) — North American pets in many cases are cared for just as well as children. For example, in 1972 more money was spent in Canada and the United States on pet food than on baby food.

Thus, it is not surprising to hear of an insurance program for owners of dogs and cats.

"Petplan" has just been introduced by the Ontario Veterinary Association in conjunction with the CNA Assurance Company.

Cottage Roll Masquerades as Ham

By HILDA BEASTALL

A satisfactory moneysaver to come across these days is a smoked cottage roll at a reasonable price. Either hot or cold, this masquerades as expensive ham which I see advertised at something like 69 cents for a six-ounce packet. This works out to a dollar eighty-four a pound.

My cottage roll cost 59 cents a pound as an unexpected special; a two-pound size for a dollar-twenty gave approximately 14 two-ounce servings when cooked, used in various ways over a week. Worked out to around eight and a half cents a serving, this is good value.

A week later, not a cottage roll to be found below 89 cents a pound. Quite often they can be found at 99 cents.

Even at that price, today they are fair value. Stuck with a few cloves, lightly sprinkled with a few grains of brown sugar and baked in a covered pan for an hour, the smoked roll has a really fine flavor, a worthy replacement for ham.

If you think the smoking is likely to be strong, barely cover the roll with cold water, bring to a gentle boil for 15 minutes. Then transfer to the heated baking dish. Bake in 325 deg. oven for about 45 minutes for two pounds.

A larger roll will need a little longer; a smaller one less time. Test the meat with steel carving fork. It should be tender but not fall apart.

Carving a cottage roll is a big frustrating unless the knife is razor sharp. First let the roll rest on a heated platter in the open oven for 15 minutes. Don't worry if the slices are not perfect. The grain is coarser than most ham but the flavor is there.

Serve hot with cooked brown rice, green peas, beet tops and Raisin Sauce:

Simmer ½ c. raisins in ½ c. water for 10 minutes.

Blend 1 tsp. cornstarch, a pinch of mustard, salt and brown sugar with a little water. Mix into raisins and water and stir until clear. Remove from heat, add 1 tsp. vinegar if liked.

Cold, the "ham" slices go with a green salad or a salad of cooked vegetables.

Sandwiches, with homemade rye or wholewheat bread cut rather thin are always a favorite for outdoor meals. Use a little of the raisin sauce in the sandwhich. Without pickles and relishes, these sandwhiches don't leave you thirsty.

Tag ends of a cottage roll make useful flavoring when added to generous servings of creamed fresh mushrooms poured over a mound of hot cooked brows rice. Don't add raisin sauce to this dish, the sweetness spoils the "wild woods" flavor of mushrooms. Better to serve beet thinnings from the garden, lightly steamed on top of the rice for the last five minutes.

Another way to use broken pieces of the roll is to put a cup of the cubed meat, a cup of leftover cooked vegetables, a cup of cubed wholewheat bread (with crusts), into a small casserole. Beat one egg with half cup of vegetable juices or skimmed milk. Pour over the rest of ingredients and bake in 325 deg. oven for 35 minutes.

Value is where you find it. Sometimes you must look for it.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Drug Effect Individual Matter

Once I learned a very important lesson in the use of drugs. Because people have different responses to drugs, not everyone will get the desired effect of a drug with the dosage "in the book." When a drug has no effect with the usual dose, it is sometimes necessary to increase, and even double the amount. I can remember when I learned this trick; my hot tempered German-speaking professor once became annoyed with me, his assistant, when I gave an insomniac patient of his the usual dose of the sleep-maker and it had no effect. When my chief learned of the problem he souted at me, "Double ze dose!"

Naturally, I am not saying what many laymen mistakenly believe, that if one pill is good, two ought to be twice as good. The important point is that one should increase the dose when the standard amount does not give the desired effect.

Years ago I had a good illustration of this principle. One night at dinner I watched a prominent lawyer friend of mine drink four martinis, one after the other, without showing any effect of the alcohol. When I asked him why he took the four martinis, he said, "I don't feel anything until the fourth." Yet I know of other highly sensitive persons who, with one sip will feel the effects of a martini. I would expect these very different persons to react just as differently to, say, a sleeping pill or a pain-killer as they do to alcohol.

Recently, a woman of 45 came into my office. She was much distressed by the typical menopausal symptoms such as flushes, sweats and depresions, which followed a hysterectomy, in which her ovaries were removed. She said that several of the doctors whom she had consulted had given her ovarian hormone, but it had had no effect at all.

It occurred to me that she might be one of those persons who are resistant to drugs, so I asked her how many martinis she could drink with her husband, and she said, "three." So I told her to start increasing the doses of ovarian hormone slowly until her breasts got sore, and then to stop. Soon she reported that they got sore with six pills, so I had her drop back, and on four pills a day, she was a new woman, perfectly happy and well.

Just now I was delighted when an old patient of mine, whom I had turned over to a physician friend, reported that when her severe abdominal pain did not stop with the usual dose of pain-relieving medicine, the doctor immediately "doubled ze dose," and she was comfortable.

This pleased me, because for many years, doctors have not seemed to realize that people have many different reactions to drugs, and that it doesn't make sense to prescribe one dose for everyone, expecting to get the same result. Some people are very sensitive to drugs, as I have said. Some don't react at all to a big dose, and others react to a usually harmless drug with nausea and vomiting or even a skin rash.

If you or somebody in your family is interested in space exploration, you will want to send for the 20-page in-depth study of the history and purpose of Alouette I — Canada's First Venture In Space. This is the story of Canada's first step into the space age and the reasons behind the Alouette program.

Canada's first man-made earth satellite was launched in September 1962. It has been in orbit since and continues its daily tasks of measuring, reporting and moving on its prescribed way. Its main purpose is to help scientists to a better understanding of the physical processes in the upper atmosphere.

You will see from the booklet that Alouette I is a relatively large scientific satellite. It weighs 320 pounds and circles the earth at an average altitude of 600 miles. Before Alouette I, practically nothing was known about the atmosphere above 200 miles from earth. The data provided by Alouette I and later satellites has bridged some of the gap.

The booklet also explains some of the major problems Canadian scientists and engineers had to solve before they attempted to launch this $3 million satellite.

Painter Rakes 'Modern Gang'

TORONTO (CP) — Renowned portrait painter Kenneth Forbes hopes that by the time his young grandson is a man, "art will not be the dirtiest business of them all."

Forbes, at 81, still paints portraits in the vein of the traditionalists, much to the joy of lovers of that art genre and to the chagrin of what he calls "the modern gang."

In more than 60 years as a professional artist, during which time he has won the Thos. Proctor Prize twice, painted three Canadian prime ministers and "lived extremely well." Forbes has maintained an unceasing tirade against "the multi-billion dollar swindle that masquerades as new art."

But while his style is deep-set in the old school of art, his success as a painter has been anything but traditional.

Britain's acclaimed Royal Academy has hung 12 of his portraits, accepting the first when he was a 19-year-old student at the Slade Art School in London where only one in 100 applications is accepted for courses.

During his career he has spurned professional art associations whose membership carries an envied mark of distinction. In 1951, he walked out of the Ontario Society of Artists and eight years later resigned from the Royal Canadian Academy. In both cases his protests lay in the official emphasis on modern art.

"I have been fighting the modern gang since my student days," he said in an interview.

"They control almost everything in art today to their own advantage. I shall go on fighting them to my last breath. The cult of the ugly must be exposed with its hordes of charlatans, neurotics and incompetents."

The son of the late Colin Forbes, also a portraint painter of international stature, Forbes began to draw as soon as he could hold a pencil.

Let Security Guard Watch Over Mansion

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is married to a very well-to-do man, wants me to move into her home while she and her husband vacation in Europe for six weeks.

I am a widow, 75, and very active. I am willing to go to her home every day to water her plants, bring in the mail, and check up on things, but the problem is their dog. She can't leave him alone, so I have to sleep there.

Abby, I am terrified of staying there alone. It is a regular mansion. She has three live-in help, (a couple and second maid) who all take their vacations at this time.

They refuse to put the dog in a kennel because they did that once and the dog went on a hunger strike and nearly died. I'd take the dog to my apartment but they don't allow dogs.

I've told my daughter I was afraid to stay at her place alone and she says, "Nothing can happen to you. Keep the floodlights on all night." I say if robbers see floodlights on all night, they will know someone is alone there. My daughter laughs at me.

I am hurt to think they think more of their dog's feelings than mine, but what can I do? They have been wonderful to me otherwise, so I hate to say no. — No Locations, Please.

DEAR NO: Why don't you invite a friend to stay there with you? Or, since your daughter is well off, suggest she hire a security guard to watch the place at night.

DEAR ABBY: I sent 32 "RSVP" invitations and received only 6 responses!

Obviously a hostess has to know how many guests to prepare for. After waiting two weeks, would it be appropriate for me to telephone those from whom I have not heard and ask if they are coming or not?

This strikes me as being somewhat pushy and I am reluctant to do it. Frustrated Hostess.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: On the outside chance that some of them did not receive your invitation, telephone them.

Youth's Free Spirit Captured in Verse

Happiness is writing poetry. So it says on the front of a booklet presented to me last week, when I visited a Grade 2 class in the Comox Elementary School.

Inside is a collection of rhymes composed by boys and girls in that classroom during the course of the school year.

These show an alertness of mind, any amount of imagination and, when you realize this is in a seven-to-eight-year age span, a remarkable originality of thought.

I wish I could print them all for you to read.

Subjects range from the RCMP to flowers, kites, animals, people, the school and even pioneer women in my book.

Here's one about the ride, written by Cecil Velose:

Police! Police!
I see the police
The mounted police
Police! Police!
Keep the peace.

A horse! A horse!
See the horse.
Boom! Boom!
See the band.

Ann Uteck didn't write about the police. She concentrated on their horses. Listen to this:

The horses—
The horses—
The music horses
They look beautiful.
Their coats
Are shiny.
They trot.
They gallop,
They walk
Everywhere.

Michael Gooding has a poem about a rose. It reads:

The rose does a good pose
Like a rose should.
The rose sometimes doesn't bloom
Because it is too soon.
Roses are red and they always get fed
Their stems are green and pretty, too.

Karen Bate wrote of a secret place she knows:

In a place
I go in spring
The flowers of lace
Pop and ring—
In this place
I go and sing.

Buddy Smith, on the other hand, looked at the trees and he wrote about leaves:

Leaves fall
From tall trees
Leaves! Leaves!
I like leaves.

Leaves! Leaves!
They turn brown.
Leaves! Leaves!
They fall down.

The kite flying season came in for its share of rhyming. Like the seven-line effort of Laurie Wilcox:

Kites are nice
I like them, too,
Kites are red and blue
I like blue.
Kites! Kites!
Kites are nice.
I like the color of kites.

And the one by Diana Malboeuf:

I have a kite
At home.
On a windy day,
I fly my kite
Close to summer—
In May.

James Cave's imagination led him to compare the school to a garden and the children to flowers:

The teacher is a tree
Teaching flowers all day.
The flowers are children
Learning in every way.
The tree lines up the flowers
For a walk.
The flowers always talk.
The garden is the school.
It is not cool.

Why was I in that classroom up at Comox? Because the youngsters there — and in Grades 1 and 4 — had been reading and discussing a part of my book, Wild Roses At Their Feet, featuring pioneer women of the Courtenay-Comox area. And they had invited me to visit them.

They were eager to ask questions. Interested in finding out why I had written the book, how I found the stories, how long it took me to write them and how a book finally got into print, after it was written. It was a stimulating experience!

That morning, before I arrived, James Cave had dashed off a rhyme about one of the women in the book — Florence Harmiston, who married Sam Cliffe when she was 16 years of age.

James read his poem aloud, during my visit. Then, with all the dignity of a grown-up, he presented it to me.

It's titled Bride At Sixteen, and it goes like this:

There was a lady
At sixteen,
She would never
Be a queen.

She got married
That single year,
She couldn't
Shed a tear.

She was famous for Something. Well—
She was helping with The Lorne Hotel.

In 1908
She cried
For her honey bun
He died.

Later I knew
Nobody cried.
They knew
The lady died.

That is the story
Of the lady
At sixteen
She was never
A queen.

James' poem and the booklet of rhymes he and his classmates composed during the year, will be placed in my files for safe keeping and as a visual reminder that youngsters in their first school years are bright, happy and eager to learn. Imaginative too, and alert.

This week sees the end of school for the summer. By Friday those boys and girls up at Comox and hundreds of others will be whooping and yelling their way into the holiday months.

So it is fitting to close this column with a three-line effort from the booklet by Sherryl Greensil:

School is out
I'm happy today
Now I can play.

Deaf Flex Muscles

By BERNIE GOEDHART

EDMONTON (CP) — Deaf people are fed up with the way they have been treated by a hearing society and are beginning to express their feelings and demand some changes.

They want a voice. And they want a say in their education.

Senior students at the Saskatoon School for the Deaf recently walked out of classes to protest the lack of sign language in instruction at the school.

They asked for total communication, which includes the use of sign language and finger spelling as well as lip reading and oral methods now used at the school.

The students returned to classes two days later after a meeting with Principal M. L. O'Connor, who was quoted as saying the students were "confused and indoctrinated with total communication" and that the strike was organized from the outside.

Students, however, said they had begun to plan their protest a month earlier, when they visited the school for the deaf in Winnipeg and decided that younger students were much more advanced there than in Saskatoon.

Their protest attracted attention. In Regina, 85 people signed a letter urging study and discussion of the total communication method advocated by the Saskatoon students.

And a week after the protest, Saskatchewan Education Minister Gordon Mac Murchy said a committee would be established to review problems at the Saskatoon school.

The Saskatchewan developments came on the heels of two W5 CTV programs dealing with the deaf. The programs, in turn, followed a countrywide study conducted by a Toronto psychologist into their problems.

The study, by Dr. Graeme Wallace, said deaf children, isolated in special schools, get substandard education from poorly qualified teachers. It said deaf adults end up in jobs with little future or with no jobs at all.

Wallace reported that between 1960 and 1966 the federal government spent $53 million helping the mentally ill, $31 million helping the blind, and $1.7 million helping the deaf.

More than 60,000 are receiving treatment for mental illness says Statistics Canada. There are about 27,000 blind persons in the country, reports the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. And there are about 50,000 deaf people in Canada. Yet the only handicapped group which received less government support were the mute, who received $96,000.

Peter Sicoli gives Deaf Power sign

"I think Dr. Wallace with this study has brought the deaf out of their shells," said Rev. Robert Bauer, pastor of Cross of Christ Lutheran Church for the Deaf in Edmonton.

"I think the deaf were more surprised than anyone else that their concerns were of a national level, not just local.

"The deaf, in many ways like the Indians, had been taught not to question—just to accept. Hearing people have said: 'We know what you want and need, here it is.'

"We have never really asked the deaf."

"I think the time has come for deaf people to really reassess their approach," said Mr. Bauer. "I think we're at the brink of a breakthrough for the deaf. unless things are shoved under the carpet."

The latter is a fear shared by the deaf and by Wallace.

Clifton Carbin, 27, of Edmonton, a deaf man who teaches a course at Alberta College for hard-of-hearing and deaf adults, said deaf people "can't strongly defend their ideas, because of the language problem."

The average education among deaf people in Canada was about Grade 5, a fact which inhibited deaf people from turning to the one method of communicating with a hearing world that was open to them—the newspaper.

"Their language is poor, they're afraid to write, embarrassed at their terrible English," said Carbin.

Some, like Carbin who holds a BA from Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., the world's only university for the deaf, are changing that. Peter Sicoli, 26, who also teaches a deaf course at Alberta College and is likewise a graduate of Gallaudet, is another.

Unlike Carbin Sicoli cannot speak. Yet he received his early education—to Grade 10—in an oral school.

During his 15 years at that school, "I saw words on the lips and didn't know what they meant," Sicoli said in sign language.

"Then I went to Gallaudet College and suddenly understood . . . Abstract words are more difficult, but by actions the teachers would show what they meant.

"Most deaf people try to lip-read a teacher but they don't catch every word. They catch maybe the beginning or the end. Therefore, there is a lot of misunderstanding."

Communist Regimes Back Big Families

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — While many nations are trying to deal with the population explosion, Communist regimes in Eastern Europe have moved to halt a sharp decline in births.

The result has been burgeoning maternity benefits and a drastic reversal from extremely liberal abortion policies to tight controls making it difficult for most women to terminate pregnancies legally.

Governments in Eastern Europe have been urging families to have more children, with the minimum goal said to be two or three in each family.

Until recently women in Hungary, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia had been given tacit government approval to have abortions. Last year for example 178,400 abortions were unofficially reported in Bulgaria in a population of about eight million.

But Hungary and Bulgaria now have announced stiff penalties for most abortions and the Czechoslovak government has begun to enforce anti-abortion directives given a year ago.

The Bulgarian government's concern was shown in December when its health ministry said one of its chief goals was to "create social, economic and psychological conditions favoring the gradual raising and stabilization of the birth rate."

Other countries in Eastern Europe have expressed similar thoughts.

Hunger Strike Over

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Six Jewish scientists ended a two-week hunger strike here Monday which was called to protest the Soviet government's refusal to grant them permission to emigrate to Israel. The six said they had proved they were their own masters. A spokesman for the group said they declared the strike to protest the "principle of state ownership of people" which he said was demonstrated in the Soviet Union.

NEW NOW NATURALS

Today we are going to talk about the New Naturals, and the girls who wear them. The New Naturals are the figure clinging little dresses by "Going Steady" now in our Young Flair Shop . . . and every one of them is a natural for the sun-fun, moon-june life style of the young crowd. All of them have the light, figure-following lines that allow a gal's natural good looks to be self-evident . . . like daring halter necklines, or elasticized waists to make a tiny waist tinier, or full gathered skirts to move the way you do. All Natural — well, almost all, here's the exception that proves the rule . . . nothing natural about the fabric! Only 100% manmade Arnel could weigh merely ounces; be so thoroughly washable and quick drying you can launder your dress (even a long one) in the evening . . . wear it again the next day, without so much as an ironing touch up. Only luscious slinky Arnel, the coolest of the cool fabrics, could come in such a dichotomy of colour: soft greens and pinks or vivid reds and black . . . polka dots, checkerboard and houndstooth checks and even combinations of dots and checks . . . a smattering of prints and plain colors, too.

Beauty and the bares
. . . the long and short of a flirtatious way to look this summer. Both dresses by "Going Steady" in 100% Arnel, both in a lively blend of polka dots and checkerboard checks, both in pale green on white all the way down to your toes or nearly to your knees.
Long gown 24.00
Short dress 18.00
Come on, bare yourself a lot this summer, in slighty naughty but nice sun-fun, moon-june fashions gathered in the Young Flair Shop now. Show shoulders, back, midriff, arms . . . they all need a little exposure this summer. Another plus, every one of these dresses is washable, packable and super-cool. If you like these, you'll love this whole seductive collection . . . in sizes 5 to 13 . . .

BEFORE THE JUDGE

It is "contemptible" to steal someone's bicycle, Judge William Ostler told a Victoria youth just before fining him $50 in provincial court Tuesday.

Brian Slater, 17, of 1441 Gladstone, pleaded guilty to attempted theft after he tried to saw the lock off a bicycle on Cook Street, May 27.

"There is a great rash of bicycle thefts in this city," Ostler said.

"People our age can't get along without a car, or think we can't, and it's the same with a bicycle to someone of a younger age.

"A bicycle may not seem important to us, but it is important to the victim."

Defence lawyer Robin Dalziel said Slater only wanted to use the bicycle to deliver his papers and that he was going to return it when he was finished.

★ ★ ★

Randy Milner, 17, of no fixed address, was fined $250 after he pleaded guilty to stealing a tool box from a parked car earlier this month.

"I agree that this was a purely impulsive act," Ostler said.

Milner agreed in court to go home with his father to Calgary and work for him in the hotel he owns.

A Victoria man was sentenced to six months in prison after he was found guilty of breaking and entering a fish and chip shop March 2 and of shoplifting a carton of cigarettes May 23.

Neil Alexander Pollock, 21, of 1125 Hillside, will probably serve his time in a forestry camp, on the recommendation of Ostler.

The theft charge arose after Pollock was picked up in a Vancouver Woodward's store for stealing a carton of cigarettes.

He was also charged with breaking and entering the Menzies Fish and Chip Shop on Menzies Street.

Defence lawyer Robin Dalziel told the court Pollock's offences had occurred while he was taking heroin.

The six-month sentences on each charge are to be served concurrently with the jail term Pollock is now serving for possession of heroin.

A Texas man was fined $150 for possession of small amounts of marijuana and hashish.

Allan Ingram, 27, of Houston, Texas, was searched by police Tuesday morning on Government Street and was found to have the drugs in his jacket pocket.

Ingram told the court he was on a working holiday in Victoria and that he was a merchant seaman.

★ ★ ★

Brian James Walters, 22, of Duncan, will spend the next seven weekends in jail for impaired driving June 17 on Foul Bay Road.

It was his second impaired driving offence.

Walters' driver's licence was suspended for six months and he was placed on six months probation.

★ ★ ★

Wilfred Orr, 49, of 2623 Richmond, was fined $250 for impaired driving June 25 on Douglas Street.

Warden's Dilemma: Open-Door Security

REGINA (CP) — Picture his dilemma:

The prison superintendent is told that he will be evaluated on his capacity to keep the prisoners from running away.

But he is not allowed to lock the prison doors any more.

The situation would not be as bad as it sounds and, handled properly, would not result in mass escapes, says E. K. Glinfort, special adviser to the Ontario justice secretariat.

The concept is called "relationship custody."

"It is, of course, nothing new for a social worker to talk an upset inmate out of running away, or for a correctional officer to help an inmate to verbalize rather than act out his problems," Glinfort said.

This makes it possible to direct all efforts in the prisons "to a common goal of assisting the inmate to function in his community after release."

The first step is to assemble in an institution prisoners assessed as having "some capacity to feel, to relate." Then the prison doors are unlocked.

"One of the first needs the staff are likely to feel strongly, after the initial panic has settled, is the need for information about each individual inmate.

"As the staff continues to interact with inmates and their knowledge base grows, it becomes possible to establish individual security needs and provide for them."

NEW RULING URGED ON INSANITY PLEA

REGINA (CP)—Courts should establish the guilt or innocence of accused persons, even if they are thought to be insane, a specialist on mentally disordered offenders said Tuesday.

Once this is done, the question of sentencing and treatment should be left to a commission, said Dr. G. D. Scott, director of the Canadian Penitentiary Service's regional medical centre at Kingston penitentiary in Ontario.

The commission would be skilled in determining an offender's "adaptability to society."

Scott, addressing the Canadian Congress of Criminology and Corrections, noted that the Criminal Code says no person shall be convicted of an offence committed while he was "insane."

This meant that the trial of persons pleading insanity centred on their mental conditions, not on facts about the offence, he said.

'Bureaucratic Buffoonery' Slammed

REGINA (CP) — Disunity and infighting among correctional workers have caused much of the public fear and confusion about the parole system, Senator Earl Hastings of Alberta said Tuesday.

The public cannot be expected to understand parole if those involved with it cannot present a united front, he told the Canadian Criminology and Corrections congress.

"We do not have a corrections system, we have a corrections conflict in Canada."

He blamed shortcomings of the system on "bureaucratic buffoonery."

427 Die in Storm

DACCA (UPI) — Three months of floods and storms in Bangladesh have claimed 427 lives and have injured 3,306 other persons, a government official said today.

Soft Beds . . . But Still Hell

REGINA (CP) — Convicts may get comfortable beds, fairly good food, television and books, but they're not "mollycoddled," says a prisoner.

"Prisons are still hell," Eugene Ostiguy, 31, a prisoner in the Prince Albert penitentiary, told the Canadian Congress of Criminology and Corrections.

Prisons deprive prisoners of love, affection, dignity and self-esteem, he said.

"The prisoner lives under a state of tension, frustration, hostility and fear caused by emotional deprivation that is punishment of the worst kind and that makes the goal of rehabilitation an exercise in futility."

Recent penal reform has failed to reduce the rates of recidivism and cases of violence within prisons, Ostiguy said.

He admitted that he had returned to prison several times.

Asked by a delegate why this occurred, he said he had not known how to look after himself and needed money the first time he was released.

After that, he said, his returns to prison resulted from the "emotional deprivation" he suffered in prison.

Ostiguy also said it is "partly due to the toughness of the human body" that more prisoners are not killed.

"Some sort of violence is expected every day. Perhaps just a fight or threats, or occasionally an attempted murder or suicide."

Wormy Water

GIBBONS, Alta. (CP) — Resident of this community 20 miles north of Edmonton have sent a petition to Environment Minister Bill Yurko protesting the quality of their drinking water which they say is dirty, smells bad and sometimes contains worms and small fish.

The 55 petitioners, who want an investigation of the town's water system, claim the water is causing vomiting, headaches, asthma and skin disorders.

"My family is not drinking this rotten water any longer," said Mrs. A. E. Blom. "Constantly we have found worms in our water tap."

Mystery of Map Which Got Lost

SURREY (CP) — A confidential planning map reappeared mysteriously after it was reported missing last year, a public inquiry into Surrey land deals and rezoning applications was told Tuesday.

Chief planner Louke Kleyn testified at the third day of the hearing that research planner Nadine Groves sent him a memorandum Dec. 12 last year saying she had been unable to find a rough working map showing proposed zoning in the municipality. Explanatory notes also were missing.

Kleyn read the memo aloud which said Mrs. Groves last saw the map on Nov. 10, 1972, and had assumed another planner was using it to make revisions.

He said he received a second memo an hour after the one from Mrs. Groves. The second memo said the map was found "in strange circumstances" — a place where it was supposed to be and that had already been searched.

"I suspect someone heard we were looking for it (the map) and replaced it," the second staff memo said. "I might be getting paranoic about this but felt you should know about it."

Kleyn said he had been worried about leaks of information from the department to developers because of comments made by alderman Ed McKitka who had told him he thought there were leaks.

Kleyn, who has been Surrey's chief planner for 10 years, said he checked but could find no indication that confidential information was getting out.

He went to municipal manager Dan Closkey urging action but the manager apparently took the matter lightly, Kleyn said.

RCMP Constable Robert Fergusson testified at the first day of the hearing that he started a "very discreet, low-key investigation" of Surrey land transactions on June 9, 1972.

Closkey was the only person at the municipal hall aware of it and was told to tell no one.

Kleyn said he went to inspector James Riddell, head of the Surrey RCMP detachment, on Oct. 23, four days after talking with McKitka.

He told Riddell of McKitka's accusation that secret Surrey plans were for sale in Vancouver.

"I was frustrated. I felt something was wrong and nothing was being done about it," Kleyn said.

AID PLEDGED FOR CHERRIES

OTTAWA (CP)—The government hopes to act soon to help British Columbia cherry growers who are being hurt by an influx of fruit from the U.S., Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Tuesday.

Donald Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) asked in the Commons whether the minister had received a telegram from B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd., "protesting the serious drop in the price of cherries."

The price drop was due to large imports from Washington, Munro said. He asked what action the government would take.

The government is concerned about the plight the growers find themselves in "and we will act, I hope shortly," Whelan said.

Baby Death Guilty Plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 27-year-old mother pleaded guilty Tuesday to infanticide in her baby's baptismal campfire death last July 24.

Catherine Mary Hoffman was granted bail by Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins pending sentence July 11 but will remain until then at Riverview mental hospital where she has been since the incident.

The mother pleaded guilty after a jury, following evidence by psychiatrist Dr. R. L. Whitman, ruled that she was fit to stand trial.

Crown counsel Jack McGivern told the court that police evidence was that Mrs. Hoffman had given birth to a son at the beginning of July, 1972, and that on July 24 she, her husband and the baby were camping near Sechelt.

About 9 a.m. that day her husband, Wolfe left the tent for a while and upon his return was told by his wife that she had "just baptised" the baby.

Wolfe ran to the campfire where he found the baby, badly burned and probably dead, McGivern said.

Nearby was a gas can from which gasoline had been poured on the fire, he stated.

The father reported his find to RCMP and his wife was taken into custody. She later made a full statement to police and was ordered to Riverview hospital.

Dr. Whitman, in stating he found the woman fit to stand trial, described her as of "upper average intelligence."

L. D. O'Grady, counsel for Mrs. Hoffman said he will ask for a suspended sentence but on terms that would place her in the care of her husband and would require her to report regularly to a psychiatrist.

Prices Higher, 'Deal Better'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver residents pay a fairer price for natural gas than persons living in Calgaary and Edmonton, even though the price is about 65 cents more per 1,000 cubic feet, a spokesman for Quasar Petroleum Ltd. told a British Columbia Energy Commission hearing Tuesday.

A Quasar brief said the field price for gas in British Columbia is about 12 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, of which the producer nets 10 cents after royalty.

Transportation charges increase the price to B.C. Hydro by 20 cents, raising the cost to 32 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

B.C. Hydro's distribution charge is 88 cents, raising the residential price to $1.20.

In Alberta, the average field price is 16 cents and the cost of transporting and distribution is 39 cents, resulting in 55 cents to residential consumers, the brief said.

Quasar said transportation costs from the field to Calgary or Edmonton would not exceed five cents.

The higher costs in B.C. are due to higher transportation costs through difficult terrain.

"We do not wish to imply by this comparison that the price charged by B.C. Hydro is excessive," said Quasar.

"We support the higher price because it comes closer to the current parity price in Vancouver which we believe should govern the price for gas wherever it is used."

REWARD DOUBLED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Businessman Alex DiCimbriani Tuesday doubled to $10,000 the reward he's offering for information leading to the conviction of the killer of Geraldine Forster. Miss Forster, 19, was gunned down June 14 in what police termed an apparently wanton slaying.

NEW LIFE FOR THE BEAVER

LANGLEY (CP)—After a two-year rest, the "ship that saved the West" will sail again.

A replica of the SS Beaver, the first steamship to ply the North Pacific, has been sold by Langley municipality to Embyr Enterprises of Vancouver, which will use her as a cruise ship.

The replica, a refurbished Canadian navy auxiliary vessel, was used extensively during the 1966 and 1971 British Columbia centennials. It was sold to Langley a year ago.

After the sale, however, the ship never left its mooring at the Esquimalt naval base near Victoria because Langley found that once you've got a ship, you've got to put it somewhere.

Alderman Gary Smith said Tuesday the municipality would have had to spend $30,000 on a new wharf for the vessel, along with several thousand dollars to bring the ship up to Canadian steamship standards.

The municipality also wanted to put it in its most logical historical environment — Fort Langley — which would have required a $200,000 dredging job on a side channel of the Fraser by the federal government. The senior government was not over-anxious to attend to the matter.

Langley, having bought the 109-foot sidewheeler for $20,002, and having spent at most $2,000 on it in the past year, sold it for $25,000.

The original Beaver, built in 1835, also served during the California and Fraser gold rushes, and was finally stripped down in 1874 and used as a tug. She was wrecked off Prospect Point, at the entrance to Vancouver harbor, in 1888.

WHALE BAN DENIED

LONDON (Reuter) — The International Whaling Commission threw out Tuesday an American proposal for a total halt to all whale hunting.

It was the second year running that the annual meeting of the 14-country commission had refused pressure to adopt a 10-year moratorium on commercial whaling.

Pressure for the moratorium was initiated by the United Nations environmental conference in Stockholm last year and pursued since then by conservationist groups.

After a plenary session of the commission Tuesday, its chairman, Inge Rindall of Norway, issued a statement saying the American resolution had failed to gain the necessary two-thirds majority.

As always in commission proceedings, the actual vote was not disclosed.

The American delegation led by Robert White, had proposed that all commercial whaling be phased out within three years.

Backers of the moratorium assert that whale stocks are still dangerously low following years of depradations by whale hunters armed with ever more formidable catch gear.

Commission scientists argued that endangered stocks such as the blue whale — the world's largest creature — are under total protection and that most of the species still on the hunters' permitted list are plentiful.

Bald Ibis Making a Comeback

By DMITRI NESTEROFF

BIRECIK, Turkey (Reuter) — The first half-dozen chicks of one of the world's rarest birds hatched out in May, allying fears that the bald-headed ibis was doomed to extinction.

The ibis, known to ornithologists as the gerontius eremita, has only one known nesting place—a split in the sandstone cliff in the centre of this little town on the banks of the Euphrates.

Indifference and the predatory behavior of human children over the last few years all but drove the ibis from its ancient nesting place and last year only four nesting couples were recorded. The eggs they laid suffered an 86-per-cent loss—some falling out of the crude, untidy nests and others broken by stones thrown by children from above.

This year, however, 67 individual birds including 25 nesting couples have been recorded and are being protected by a 25-year-old German, Udo Hirsch of the World Wildlife Fund.

Hirsch has been coming to Birecik for four years to record the arrival, nesting habits and departure of the birds. He has succeeded in stimulating some local interest and pride in the town's unique temporary citizens and has got them to set up a "Save Our Ibis" organization with posters and lapel badges.

This year, Hirsch clambered up the cliff face to widen the nesting ridge to about two feet, construct a narrow wooden platform for added protection and, most important, to build a high wall on the cliff top to keep stone-throwers away.

Little is known regarding the habits of the ibis .Where exactly it goes after its nesting period here can be any point between Saudi Arabia and Ethiopia.

"We would very much like to put rings on these birds but that would be fatal since the people living on the Red Sea and Horn of Africa seem to delight in shooting ringed birds," Hirsch says.

The ibis feeds mainly on insects, with an occasional small frog ,and will fly as far as 43 miles each day up the Euphrates in search of food.

It also appears to be an over-indulgent parent, stuffing the fledglings with grasshoppers until they can hardly move. When the time comes for the family to return to its winter quarters somewhere in Africa, the parents have to starve their young to bring their weight down to flying proportions.

Although migratory, the bald ibis does not travel in a flock. Hirsch describes the arrival in February of a single bird, apparently making a reconnaissance.

"We waited for days with bated breath to see whether others would follow. And then they did begin to drift in—individual birds, in pairs and even in groups of as many as a half-dozen. But would they stay was the great question?

"Fortunately for us, and for them too, they stayed and this year looks like being a record season. Perhaps the bald ibis will survive."

HISTORIC VISIT

BONN (WP) — Romania's leader, Nicolae Ceausescu, arrived here Tuesday for a five-day stay that makes him the first head of state from a Warsaw Pact country to visit West Germany.

Ceausescu, who is both chairman of Romania's council of state and chief of its Communist party, will be the guest of Chancellor Willy Brandt's government only one month after Bonn played host to Soviet communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Flight Pay Abused

WASHINGTON (WP) — Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John D. Ryan and 64 other air force generals are drawing flight pay despite a newly imposed congressional ban on such payments to top air force brass with "non-combat assignments."

Rep. Les Aspin (D—Wis.), who disclosed the flight payments, called it "a clear violation of law and an utter defiance of civilian authority by the Pentagon brass."

The air force confirmed, following Aspin's statement, that it had authorized flight pay status for 132 general officer slots under the new restrictions. Of these, 65 are staffed by generals.

The congressional restrictions on flight pay were enacted because of widespread complaints that the system was being abused by "weekend warriors" — officers who drew full flight benefits by putting in token flying time.

It has been estimated that the new restrictions would achieve annual savings of $14.6 million.

As the new law has been implemented by the air force, those eligible to draw flight pay include Ryan and eight three-star generals, including the commander of the U.S. Air Force Academy, the air training command and the air defense command.

Flight pay ranges from $245 a month for a lieutenant colonel with 18 years of service to $100 a month for a second lieutenant with less than two years' service.

Ranger, Ga., hatchery workmen dump baby chicks in drums for burial

Chicks Killed in Price Freeze

ATLANTA (UPI) — After slaughtering 22,000 baby chickens, a Georgia poultry farmer Tuesday said he would rather kill his entire brood than face financial losses "three times as much" by trying to sell them under the current 60-day price freeze.

George Allen of Gordon County said the price "of poultry is frozen at below production costs and the price of feed just keeps climbing."

Allen, executive director of the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Association, said his members, who produce 85 per cent of the nation's broilers and 40 per cent of the table eggs, believe the farmer can no longer face the possibility of financial ruin.

Another farmer, Harold E. Ford, said there would be a "major reduction of up to 4 to 5 per cent in table eggs and 12 to 15 per cent in frying chickens" if the present freeze continued.

He said egg farmers across the country were losing 3 to 4 cents a dozen and frying chicken producers were losing about 5 to 8 cents per pound.

Ford said he still hoped for some sort of relief.

"Maybe it will be in the form of granting a special exemption of letting the market move up 3 or 4 cents a pound," he speculated, "or they will announce Phase IV quicker than originally planned."

Richard Royal of Camilla, a processor, said although prices weren't frozen at the processing level, many of his customers were distributors, whose prices have been frozen.

"They cannot stand these losses so we are having to subsidize some of our customers," he said.

The poultry association spokesman said the federal cost of living council created a potential problem for the consumer "far greater than what it is today."

Guatemala Shaken

GUATEMALA CITY (Reuter) — Repeated earth tremors shook central Guatemala Tuesday, bringing buildings crashing down, opening cracks in roads, and spreading panic among the country's one million inhabitants.

No casualties were reported.

Houses and offices collapsed as repeated quakes rocked the town of Villanueva, near Pacaya volcano, about 12 miles south of the capital, officials said.

Dozens of pregnant women were frightened into giving birth prematurely, hospitals said.

U.S. Army Boot Applied To a Third of Deserters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Army has sent letters to a third of its deserters living overseas saying it is prepared to kick them all out of the service, Pentagon records showed today.

The 677 men are all aliens who disappeared from their units more than a year ago. The army reasons they aren't likely to return to the United States, where they could be prosecuted.

The discharge in absentia has been a rarity until now. Less than 10 a year were issued in the past seven years, the Pentagon said. They usually are used against aliens.

Each of the men has been sent a letter saying he may have free military legal help, and present his case to a discharge board if he wishes. The letters say an undesirable discharge is recommended but a better grade of discharge may be issued. None of the 677 soldiers has been discharged yet.

The undesirable discharge is the middle grade of five discharges used. The two lower grades, bad conduct and dishonorable, deprive a man of virtually all post-discharge benefits available to the two higher grades.

Australian Gov't Threatens to Call Vote

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
CP Correspondent

CANBERRA (CP) — Less than six months after an election that brought a Labor government to power for the first time in 23 years, Australians are facing the prospect of a new poll in which the government's existence could be threatened.

The problem is Australia's two-House parliamentary system which makes it essential for any government to have a majority in both houses if it is to rule effectively.

The Labor government of Gough Whitlam has a nine-seat majority in a 125-seat House of Representatives but holds only 26 of 60 seats in the Senate. And all legislation has to be passed by both the House and the Senate before it can become law.

With the hostile Senate blocking important government legislation Prime Minister Whitlam can, under the constitution, call for a double dissolution—an election for all members of both the Senate and the House of Representatives simultaneously. He is threatening to do this.

The combined opposition of Liberals, Country Party and extreme right-wing Democratic Labor Party is becoming increasingly confident that it can take on the government and win.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

But Whitlam and his close advisers refuse to consider the possibility of defeat in an election and his threats to call an early vote for both houses of Parliament are at least beginning to be taken seriously.

Working to Whitlam's advantage is that he can decide the timing of an election and the issue.

He will also be able to point to a degree of government activity during his short period in office that is unequalled since the Second World War.

In fact, if the government does strike trouble it will be because of its controversial vigor rather than its inactivity. The contrast with the lethargic attitude of the last years of the Liberal-Country Party government is most marked.

Whitlam, who is also foreign minister, set a scorching pace in world affairs when he took office, establishing diplomatic relations with China and East Germany within weeks and later with North Vietnam. There have also been Australian diplomatic and trade contacts with North Korea, Cuba and East European countries.

Whitlam has rejected opposition charges that he is taking Australia "into the Communist orbit." He says he is simply putting balance into Australia's foreign policy. He argues that the previous government's policy was obsessed with the threat of Asian communism and this led to the rejection of any diplomatic or political links with Peking.

CRITICIZED BOMBING

But the most controversial aspect of Labor government foreign policy has arisen from the deterioration in relations with the United States.

This originated from a highly critical letter sent by Whitlam to President Nixon during the Christmas bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong and strongly-worded attacks by other Labor ministers.

Apparently, the Labor victory at the election surprised Washington officials who had been told by the U.S. Embassy in Canberra that there would be no change of government.

Reliable sources say President Nixon rejected an offer from Whitlam to visit Washington to smooth things over but, invitation or not, Whitlam will be in Washington early in August on his way to the Commonwealth heads of government meeting in Ottawa.

But it is on the home front that Whitlam's real troubles have been looming. Because of constitutional requirements, the earliest time for a double dissolution of Parliament would be September or October.

By then it is expected inflation may be reaching economic crisis levels in Australia. Since Labor came to power, the inflation rate has jumped from five per cent to an estimated eight per cent a year.

The government is making desperate efforts to curb prices and has set up a prices justification tribunal to investigate price rises by major companies. But it is under attack for failing to tackle rapidly rising wages—and the charge is that the government is afraid to offend the powerful trade union movement which has such close links with the Labor party.

Coal Mine Takeover Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — Gradual takeover by the provincial government of the McIntyre Porcupine Coal Mines at Grande Cache in Alberta's west-central foothills was urged Tuesday by the United Steelworkers of America.

The union, representing about 600 miners and other production workers employed by McIntyre Porcupine at the town 265 miles west of Edmonton, said that to leave Alberta coal in the hands of private enterprise "is simply to cheat the people."

It took this position in a submission to a provincially-appointed commission headed by N. R. Crump, former Canadian Pacific Railway president, which was set up after a massive layoff of miners and contract terminations of supervisory and management staff.

Steelworkers troubleshooter Stu Cook of Toronto, delivering the brief, said the government "should create a new Crown corporation to develop and sell Smoky River coal."

McIntyre's investment could be recognized by issuing it long-term government bonds that could be paid off by the future profits of the Crown corporation.

The USWA conceded that any immediate takeover would be too expensive, but said a first step could be an increase in provincial coal royalties paid for with company shares.

SIX-HOUR DUNKING SURVIVED

NEW SALEM, Mass. (AP) — A woman was rescued today after she was trapped underwater for more than six hours when her car plunged into a small pond.

Police said Barbara McLaren, 20, apparently survived by breathing an air pocket trapped in the car. The vehicle was completely submerged.

The car went off a road about 1 a.m. and plunged into a small pond formed by a stream that flows into nearby Quabbin reservoir, police said.

About 6:30 a.m., a passerby noticed Miss McLaren's arm above the water's surface, waving a white plastic bag.

Head-Hunter Fame Dims Slowly

By JOSE KATIGBAK

KAPIT, Sarawak (Reuter) — Shrunken heads the size of coconut shells are still to be found here today, reminders of the time when this East Malaysian state used to be known as the land of the head-hunters.

The Sarawak Museum has about 60 such heads on display and in some Dayak longhouses they are still to be seen hanging in a place of honor.

Dayaks, or Ibans as they are more commonly called now, were the most feared warriors because of the zeal with which they collected heads. Now they are probably one of the most peaceful peoples in the state.

They have learned to adjust to civilization while still retaining some of their centuries-old customs.

Head-hunting was believed to have formally ceased in Sarawak in 1924 when the three main rival tribes—the Kayans, Kenyahs and Ibans—met in this small village about 190 miles east of Kuching literally to "bury the hatchet."

But some isolated cases continued for years and during the Japanese occupation head-hunting was said to have been revived to some extent, with the Japanese as the main targets.

Although head-hunting has ended some traces of its influence can still be felt.

Whenever a big project such as the construction of a bridge is launched in a remote area, rumors circulate of a stranger being found nearby with his head missing.

The reports gain credibility because Ibans are said to favor hanging heads over a new project to insure its success.

But museum curator Benedict Sandin, an Iban himself, declares that none of the rumors has proved true.

Sandin said the history of just when Ibans became head-hunters is obscure but one folk tale puts the time at about the 12th century.

REVENGE against overwork and strikes appears to be the explanation for this DC-3 eating its technician, but actually, the plane is getting its routine servicing from Jim Bristow in Edmonton for routine flights throughout the North.

Pollution-Destruction System Turns It All Into Carbon

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Iain Davidson has found a new way to fight pollution — he makes carbon from any kind of organic waste, even tires.

The patented process has a complicated name but a simple theory.

The Delta-Cameron Process for Destructive Distillation by Pyrolysis simply involves heating the waste until the oil and gas are driven off and all that is left is pure carbon.

Mr. Davidson said pyrolysis is an age-old process and goes back centuries to the original method of producing charcoal.

He is president of Delta Engineering and Research Ltd., which has been primarily interested in pollution control since it was founded in 1964.

Old tires, dogfish, restaurant garbage, sewage, bark, chips and sawdust, all are loaded into the oven of the $23,000 prototype model.

Heated with 1,000-degree steam and fed a controlled amount of air, the waste is then baked for up to 14 hours.

TIRE-SHAPED CARBON

The gas and oil are tapped and what is left is 98-per-cent pure carbon, sometimes in the shape of the original tire or dogfish.

"As far as the carbon goes, it's a 10-to-1 reduction," said Mr. Davidson.

Other useful byproducts result, depending on the waste. Hog fuel produces turpentine and acetic acid.

The carbon can be sold for use in filtration, clarification, odor control and other purification processes. The gases and oils can also be sold, or used to fire the steam-producing unit in the process, which reduces the cost of the process to practically nothing.

Mr. Davidson said it will take $400,000 and nine months to develop a commercial unit capable of reducing 50 tons of waste a day through a continuous process operation.

This would be a vertical unit. The waste, fed by conveyor, would pass into a vertical retort through an air-lock star valve.

He said a commercial unit's cost would be based on its daily capacity: $3,000 to $3,200 a ton of refuse processed.

TWO UNITS IN USE

The first two units built now are used in co-inventor Eric Cameron's air purification businesses in Yakima, Wash.

Delta Engineering, based in North Vancouver and started in 1964 by Mr. Davidson, has been primarily interested in pollution control.

With a permanent staff of 11 and an annual gross income of $600,000 to $800,000, Delta has worked for forest products companies and refineries in British Columbia and Alberta, working on combustion engineering.

"Water and air purification are our two main fields and we use a lot of carbon in these processes."

Two major Japanese corporations have taken an "evaluation agreement" option and are trying to decide whether to underwrite the cost of developing a commercial waste disposer-converter in return for subsequent manufacturing rights.

Representatives from the companies spent 17 days here watching Mr. Davidson put the prototype through its paces.

Lawyer Mediation Eyed

TORONTO (CP) — The Law Society of Upper Canada announced today it has set up a committee to mediate disputes between lawyers and dissatisfied clients.

The society, governing body of the 8,000 members of the legal profession in Ontario, said the committee will hold hearings each month.

Clients, who write complaining about a lawyer's handling of a case, can attend the hearings. The lawyer will be invited to attend, but will not be obligated to do so.

The society said the committee will "try to solve the problem or at least prevent it from worsening."

The committee will concern itself with relatively minor complaints, those falling short of negligence or dishonesty.

Negligent lawyers can be sued and all carry insurance which pays off if they lose a law suit. Dishonest lawyers are expelled from the profession, whose members pay about $100 annually to the law society's compensation fund which reimburses victims for at least part of their losses.

WATER FOR ROYALTY

TORONTO (CP) — The Queen and Prince Philip drank Liquor Control Board of Ontario products Monday night—but their water was imported from England.

Her Majesty sipped on a gin and tonic during a press reception at the Royal York Hotel and Prince Philip drank a scotch.

Although rumors abounded that the liquor was "special," a spokesman said it was "just plain old LCBO stuff."

But special bottled water from Malvern, England, is being provided for the royal couple "so their stomachs don't get upset by drinking so many different kinds of water," he said.

Fast Pace Shatters Stewardess 'Dream'

By GEORGE VINE

BONN (Reuter) — The "dream job" of air hostess appears to be losing its glamor for German girls today. Miss Deutschland 1973 no longer has her heads in the clouds and her eye fixed on an intrepid pilot.

Lufthansa, the West German airline, is finding it so difficult to recruit German girls as stewardesses that it has had to lower its exacting standards.

The physical proportions of a striptease dancer coupled with the manners of a duchess, the solicitude of a nun and a certificate of higher education no longer are insisted on as minimum qualifications.

Edith Lewandowski, Lufthansa's chief of cabin personnel and a former stewardess herself, says the job has been "de-mythologized." She turns a blind eye to a few inches less on the height chart or a few pounds more on the weight scales.

Wearing glasses is no longer an obstacle. A medium-grade education is good enough and experience in the hotel or tourist business is an asset.

TRAVEL CHEAPER

Airline executives believe there are two main reasons why girls are no longer attracted to flying. At one time, jobs as stewardesses were sought after as a cheap way of seeing the world. But today charter planes and group travel have brought flying within the reach of many more people.

The second reason, they think, is that the stewardess has been given a bad name in a number of novels and films where she is depicted as a "high-altitude call-girl."

But the real reason, explained one stewardess who has been flying for 11 years, is that bigger and faster airliners have made the job much more strenuous and the compensations scarcer.

"In the old days when planes were slower we had plenty of time to serve the passengers and could rest for part of the flight. These days we are on our feet from take-off to touchdown.

"In the old days we used to have much longer stopovers and turnarounds in foreign countries. The modern aircraft fly so fast that we go somewhere, turn straight around and fly back. All we have is an hour at the airport."

JUMBOS NO HELP

The shortage of stewardesses has been aggravated by the introduction of jumbo-jets and the extension of international services. A jumbo must have 13 cabin personnel on board. To keep one jumbo jet flying, a pool of 90 persons is necessary, allowing for crew changes, holidays and sickness.

So few girls are available that Lufthansa is using a larger proportion of male stewards.

Edith Lewandowski has hired 140 ex-stewardesses on seasonal contracts. Some of them had given up flying years ago to marry and have children. "And for the first time we are hiring stewardesses from other airlines," she said.

Lufthansa is advertising for girls in Scandinavia, South America and the United States.

The recruits must be unmarried and aged between 19 and 26. The starting salary is $500 a month plus a 13th month's salary at the end of the year. After 10 years the basic pay rises to $800. Stewards and stewardesses are paid the same.

Ocean Novices Sail Atlantic

PORTSMOUTH, England (CP) — A Canadian farmer and a surveyor who sailed the Atlantic in a 36-foot sloop with no more training than a spell on the Great Lakes are taking it easy in this south-coast port after a 20-day crossing in which they weathered three fierce storms, pack-ice and a broken tiller.

Farmer Ken Campbell, 37, of Dublin, Ont., and surveyor Harry Whale, 38, of Hanover, Ont., arrived here Saturday after completing a voyage they had dreamed of making for years.

"It was something we always wanted to do," said Campbell in a telephone interview from the Portsmouth yacht marina where the two men are staying on their boat, Mary Poppins. They had sailed her from Halifax to Trepassy, Nfld., a four-day trip, before beginning the transatlantic odyssey.

They ate mostly canned foods—meat, vegetables and desserts—plus potatoes and four dozen eggs. They took along two cases of beer and well-wishers gave them 15 or 16 bottles of wine, of which they still had four or five left when they tied up in Portsmouth.

"We mostly drank tea and soups," said Campbell. "Tea was the big thing."

"We had 60 gallons of water in our regular holding tanks and 12 gallons besides but our 30-gallon tank held us till we sighted the Scilly Isles off southwest England."

"We did all our dish-washing in sea-water and used the fresh for drinking."

The weather was so rough the pair had no time for reading. They took a tape-recorder for entertainment but it soon got wet and was useless.

They had radio for direction finding and time signals only. On the Grand Banks of Newfoundland they sighted six or seven icebergs and stopped one night in the pack-ice for a couple of hours.

"In the first storm we were a bit concerned, because we'd never been in anything like it," said Campbell. They stopped, put sea-anchors out and later went on. The second storm hit them from the east and they hove to for seven hours. But by the third big blow, which came from a southerly direction, "we just sailed through the whole thing."

The 20-day crossing was "about what we figured," said Campbell. "We had strong winds all the way across."

The two men, who have sailed together for seven or eight years, plan to sell their yacht — they hope to get $17,000 to $18,000 — but will return to Canada in a week or 10 days whether they sell it or not.

EYE-CATCHER on a country road near Chatham, Ont., causes passers-by to wonder what is supposed to be supporting what. The hanging half of the telephone pole remained after the bottom was struck by a car.

Allergy Research Backs Walt Disney's Sneezy

TORONTO (CP) — Walt Disney may have been a better statistician than he realized when in 1938 he produced the movie Snow White and named one of the seven dwarfs Sneezy.

It is estimated that one in seven persons is sneezy—or wheezy or itchy as the result of an allergy.

And for more than a million Canadians who get hay fever, this is the worst season.

"If you've never had hay fever you can't imagine how miserable it can make you," says Dr. Allan Knight, head of the division of allergy and immunology at Sunnybrook Medical Centre here.

"Your nose gets so stuffy you can hardly breathe, or sleep or taste anything or smell anything. It comes on just when life should be at its best—the nice warm spring days, camping in the country, the beautiful late summer hazy days, all spoiled."

Dr. Knight, who is also associate professor of medicine at the University of Toronto, has written a book called Allergy: A Layman's Guide to Sneezing, Wheezing and Itch.

WON'T CURE IT

It's not likely to cure anyone's allergy, but it tells what the doctors know—and don't know—how they treat allergies, and why.

Being sad, for instance, can make a person itchy, says Dr. Knight.

He describes a woman so homesick for her native land that her skin was constantly irritated.

But usually allergy is caused by something in the environment, he says, such as pollen, cat hair or dust.

Ragweed is one of the worst causes of allergy because it produces a lot of pollen which is readily airborne, he says.

Under a microscope, a grain of ragweed pollen looks like a golf ball with a spiky halo, says Dr. Knight. "The spikes break the thin lining of the muculous membranes of the nose and eyes and enter the deeper layers."

And soon the victim feels under par.

Retired Officer Fires at Cadets

COURTENAY (CP) — A 54-year-old retired air force officer was fined $500 in provincial court here after he was found guilty of the dangerous use of a firearm.

Judge Charles Pearce was told that Walter Leonard Drake of Comox was charged after he fired his revolver at four sea cadets.

The youths said they were returning from sea cadet training May 16 when a man in a bathrobe appeared from a house and fired a revolver. One of the youths said the bullet struck the ground in front of him and he was hit by a flying rock.

Brothers Robert and Arthur Lagasse, aged 16 and 13 respectively, Brian Currie, 15, and Billy Mills, 14, said they had been throwing stones into the water and Drake ordered them to retrieve them.

"We thought he was joking," one of them told the court. "Then when we wouldn't, he went into the house and came out with a revolver."

Currie said Drake told the boys to move and when he said, "I beg your pardon?" the gun was fired.

Drake, who said he retired from the armed forces with the rank of acting group captian, testified that he had been preparing to go to bed when he heard something hit his house. He said he went to investigate.

When he saw the boys he told them to "get off my property."

Drake told the court he never intended to harm the boys and if he had intended to, "he had much heavier armament in he house."

He said he had fired the revolver "to enforce my statement" that the youths were to leave the area of his home.

Drake agreed his action was a "rash move" and admitted he had no reason to believe the boys were ones whom had "harrassed me before."

FILM FEATURES KILLER WHALES

Haida and Chimo, Sealand of the Pacific's two killer whales, have been immortalized by the National Film Board.

A 15-minute color film on the two whales, made in June 1972 before Chimo's death, will get its premiere here Friday.

Featured in We Call Them Killers, besides Chimo and Haida, are flutist Paul Horn and Vancouver-based cetologist (whale expert) Dr. Paul Spohn, who also narrates the film.

Haida is shown lazily rolling in the water to the music of the flutist, as well as performing with Chimo in the regular Sealand show.

Underwater footage shows Spohn in skindiver gear in the pool with the whales.

Film director Tom Shandel, a Vancouver filmmaker, and producer Peter Jones of the National Film Board, were at a press screening Tuesday at the Odeon Theatre.

"This film is like a primer to make people interested in whales," said Shandel.

Because it will be distributed to hundreds of countries to be shown as a short along with feature films, it had to be kept simple and visual, said Shandel. Many people seeing it won't speak English, and the film may not be dubbed, he said.

Cost of the production was $40,000.

The film opens Friday at the Odean 1 Theatre.

Illegitimacy Stays Steady

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — While births in Austria have slowly declined since 1964, the number of illegitimate children born has remained nearly constant at 14,000 each year, the statistical office said.

It's Painful, But Draws Laughs

OTTAWA (CP) — Graham Chapman, one of the eight members of the British television comedy Monty Python's Flying Circus, limped through the lobby of a local hotel.

And after spending most of the previous evening wrestling with himself through two performances at the National Arts Centre, it was no wonder.

His exuberant encounter with himself came during two hours of insanity the BBC-born troupe was taking across Canada as Monty Python's First Farewell Tour.

The tour was to play Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal, Calgary, Regina, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Vancouver.

In the wrestling sketch Chapman, hairy-chested and garbed in bright red, battled himself to the stage and caught himself in a series of surprise holds that would make a yoga devotee jealous. Ultimately declared the winner he won the right to meet himself in the championship of the century.

For the benefit of Canadian audiences, the troupe has changed a few lines — the Yorkshire wife becoming a woman who hails from Moose Jaw to entice the local audience to predictable glee.

But the classic Canadian piece is the Lumberjack Song, a hearty tune with a chorus of red-coated Mounties.

In this year of the RCMP's centennial, it was expected Canadian audiences would be alternately tickled and outraged as the hefty lumberjack declares he "puts on women's clothing and hangs around bars."

Otherwise the tour is an assortment of Python favorites drawn from the television series, a movie and three record albums.

Typical the sketches in the show narrowly skirt the fine line between the hilarious and the grotesque. Python humor is largely violent.

"It's a release to do something stupid," Mr. Chapman, a former physician, said in an interview. "It just makes you feel better when you've done it.

"I think the rest of us should be a little more idiotic than we are. There's a completely free feeling about being completely nutty."

The group began with a 13-week BBC series in 1969. A second 13-week TV series now is being played in CBC stations.

As for the name, Mr. Chapman says it was selected because "it has absolutely no significance whatsoever."

Violence Marks 8 of 10 Shows

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The average U.S. television viewer saw violence depicted in eight of every 10 programs and nine of 10 cartoons he watched last year, according to the dean of the University of Pennsylvania's communications school.

Dr. George Gerbner, dean of the Annenberg School, said in a report released Tuesday the level of televised violence in 1972 was slightly below the 1971 rate.

According to the study, NBC network programs increased in violence in 1972, while ABC programs increased at a lesser rate. CBS programs showed a decline in violent content.

The study also found that women and non-whites were increasingly portrayed as victims of violence, leading to what the report termed "an invidious pattern of fear and power."

The study was based on an analysis of a sample week of network dramatic programs telecast in evening prime time and Saturday daytime during the fall. It was sponsored by a grant from the U.S. National Institute of Mental Health.

Gerbner, assisted by assistant communications professor Dr. Larry Gross, measures the over-all level of TV mayhem on a "violence index," based on the percentage of shows containing violence, the number of violent episodes per show and the percentage of leading characters involved in violence.

The slight decrease in the 1972 index, according to the researchers, resulted from a drop in the percentage of leading characters involved in violence from 73 to 58 per cent.

Pesticide Curbs Watered Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bending to pressure from Congress and farmers, the United States labor department has watered down regulations intended to protect farm workers from pesticides.

John Stender, assistant labor secretary, said the original regulations were "broader than necessary" and covered some pesticides that "are not highly toxic."

Stender signed the revised emergency regulations Friday. They were not to be announced until June 29 but a copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

The initial regulations, which governed the time lapse before farm workers could enter fields or orchards sprayed with organophosphorous chemicals, met heavy opposition from growers and farm state congressmen.

Consumers are protected by federal laws banning the sale of crops with excessive pesticide residues, but the regulations were the first federal attempt to protect farm workers from the poisons.

Splashes of Color Double for Indoors

Herbaceous perennials as isolated groups of one kind in a shrub garden have more than the obvious use of lending unexpected color to a spot when nearby shrubs are out of flower. They are quite often a source of cut flowers for home decoration.

This is what happens with some of the splendid yellow daisy-type perennials now coming into bloom. Two are Buphthalmum salicifolium, the yellow Ox-eye, and Helenium Wyndley Gold.

These two serve quite different purposes, for the Buphthalmum is compact at 12 inches height, while this Helenium is 15 to 18 inches and of a loose general habit.

Buphthalmum salicifolium is quite charming with its spikey, crisp yellow daisy-type flowers atop stems of narrow willow-like leaves just as the specific name indicates (salix—willow, folium—leaves). Buds quickly open in succession, making a real patch of sunshine between green foliaged shrubs.

★ ★ ★

Sunshine is needed by every yellow or gold flower I can think of, even the little yellow wood violets like a patch of woodland sunlight.

When the main display is over, cut off all the old flower heads with shears or secateurs. A new crop will soon follow, for Buphthalmum blooms from late June to September.

Helenium Wyndley Gold is the earliest of this genus to flower. Others with darker color combinations appear by late summer, continuing as fall flowers into October. Wyndley Gold will then have a few late blooms too.

Of heavy texture, the broad petalled flowers of the golden yellow Helenium are frilly on the edges, giving a luxurious appearance to the plants. The centre disk, broad and rounded, adds to the apparent size of each flower.

Long lasting both in garden and as a cut flower all Heleniums are garden worthy, but this early one needs less frequent lifting for division than the others. It lasts for eight years or more without division, still giving a good show of bloom.

★ ★ ★

For a border space where sunshine is limited from two o'clock on, lovely Hemerocallis Hesperus will, once established, bloom for several weeks.

These are commonly known as Daylilies for each flower does last only one day. With eight or 10 buds to each stem, every morning you will find several opening their six-inch wide scented blossoms for your enjoyment.

The lemon yellow Hyperion in another enormous Hemerocallis to enliven the dark green summer shrub border. And these are only two of dozens of named varieties, badly neglected by gardeners wanting perennials for minimum maintenance in modern gardens.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Tim McCarver, star catcher in the National League, is also a pretty good bridge player. In the Mixed Pairs Championships in 1972, which took place in Lancaster, Pa. this past fall, he demonstrated that he has "finesse" not only on the baseball diamond, but also at the bridge table. He was the South declarer.

Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	1 NT
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

At most of the tables, the final contract of three no-trump was arrived at via the above sequence. On West's opening lead of the spade six, East put up the queen, and the trick was captured by South's king.

Usually, South then led his diamond three, and when West followed suit with the seven, dummy's ten was inserted. This was a double-finesse: when South regained the lead, he would lead another diamond and finesse dummy's queen. If West possessed either the jack or king, one of South's finesses would win, and he would be en route to brining home dummy's diamond suit.

But those declarers who finessed dummy's diamond ten never got a chance to take the second finesse, for when East captured the ten with his jack, he shifted to a low club. The defenders then cashed five club tricks, and declarer was down two.

When McCarver was the South declarer, he did not take the double finesse. Instead, after winning his spade king at trick one, he led a low diamond and finessed the board's queen successfully. Then came the diamond ace, felling East's jack. A third diamond lead was now taken by West's king.

West thought for a while, and finally concluded that McCarver had the king of clubs. So he did not play a club. Instead he returned the jack of spades to drive out dummy's ace, and to establish his spade suit. McCarver now scampered home with ten tricks: two spades, four hearts, and four diamonds.

As McCarver played the hand—by taking the single finesse in diamonds—he kept East out of the lead, and thus minimized the danger of a club shift at trick three. The deal was played 13 times. Only McCarver and two other South declarers made as many as 10 tricks.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. H. HUNTER

Charlie was checking. "You sold 74 spark plugs today," he said. "That's great, but how come so many?"

"Just regular service. 8-cylinder, 6-cylinder, and 4-cylinder cars," replied Brian. "A full set for every car, and there were twice as many fours as sixes."

How many 8-cylinder cars?

Thanks for an idea to B. Hrudka, Paincourt, Ontario.

Mambo (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A 1954 Italian-American drama about a salesgirl who rises to the heights as a glamorous dancer and becomes involved in a complicated love affair. International cast includes Silvana Mangano, Shelley Winters and Vittorio Gassmann.

DOUBLE WIN was earned by the destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau this year when she received the anti-submarine warfare shield and the L. W. Murray gunnery trophy. The Esquimalt-based ship beat out all other vessels in Canada's fleet, scoring the highest number of points on exercises throughout the year. Rear-Admiral R. H. Leir, third from left, presented the coveted trophies. Gatineau's skipper, Cmdr. Tom Murphy is second from right in back row.

Highway Hunting Restricted

The B.C. fish and wildlife branch has banned the shooting of game animals along three major highways.

The move follows protests against the practice of shooting deer, moose and other animals from or near cars.

The regulation establishes half-mile no-shooting corridors along Highway 16 between Prince Rupert and the Alberta boundary, Highway 97 between Cottonwood River and Dawson Creek and Highway 37 from the Nass River bridge to Stewart and from Stewart to the Yukon boundary.

Wildlife director Dr. James Hatter said the ban may eventually be extended to other highways.

"Hunting by car on arterial highways is distasteful to a lot of people," he said. "It's also bad for the hunter's image to be labelled highway hunter.

"Many motorists like to see wild animals and don't like to see them slaughtered before their eyes."

He also noted that roads are being punched through the last remaining truly wilderness areas in northern British Columbia.

"Our frontier land is fast disappearing," he said. "The animals wander on these new roads and must receive some measure of protection."

Hatter said the new regulations also include reductions in the deer, elk and moose seasons in various areas of the province.

"This had to be done because the animals have not recovered from the severe winters three years ago," he said. "The loss of deer and elk was heavy."

Hunting pressure in certain areas of the province had also reduced the animal population, he said.

He said one regulation prohibits non-residents from shooting anterless deer and anterless moose in the Cariboo-Chilcotin districts.

Other changes are closed seasons on some localized and endangered mountain goat herds in all regions.

The ban on shooting the Vancouver Island wolf remains.

The bag limit on cougars has also been reduced from five to two, but on Vancouver Island the bag is still one cougar.

CANADA DAY SPECIAL

This Saturday, Weekend Magazine continues its tradition of presenting a special Canada Day edition. Kenneth Weber provides fascinating bits of information about Canadian history, including a list of Canadian Firsts. John David Hamilton writes about the role played by maple trees in Canada. There's a prize-winning essay on being Canadian by an 18-year-old Toronto student, and a story on Canada's great Seagram horse racing stable. Particularly striking are the full color reproductions of paintings by Robert Harris, best known for his famous picture of the Fathers of Confederation. Bomb Ban Veto

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today vetoed legislation to cut off funds for U.S. bombing of Cambodia, claiming it would "cripple or destroy" chances for a negotiated peace there and would be "a serious blow" to U.S. credibility around the world.

The House of Representatives sustained the veto.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield then retorted that Nixon would be responsible for the federal government grinding to a halt if he persists in the air war.

Nixon rejected a $3.3 billion supplemental appropriations bill containing a provision barring the use of appropriated funds for further military activity "in, over or from the shores of" Laos and Cambodia.

Congress would keep attaching the same amendment to every available bill, Mansfield vowed.

"If he doesn't want to stop the bombing, but wants to stop the government, it's up to him," Mansfield said.

The majority leader said he saw no way out of the constitutional crisis short of a decision by Nixon to end the air war.

Judging from anti-war votes recorded this week, the house does not have the two-thirds majority to override the president, although the Senate probably does.

Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said the legislation reached Nixon's desk Tuesday evening and the president decided upon his veto after conferring by telephone with Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Gerald Ford of Michigan, Republican leader of the House of Representatives.

The veto was decided upon shortly after the legislation cleared the Senate by a vote of 81 to 11.

A more serious test of wills between Congress and the president is expected to emerge this week, when Congress sends Nixon a resolution permitting government agencies to continue to draw appropriated funds after the current fiscal year closes Saturday.

Unless this resolution passes, government agencies will be without funds to operate.

The House already has voted to attach the amendment to this resolution and the Senate was expected to follow and send the measure to the president in a few days.

'Within five minutes, all were going to beat hell'

Vancouver Arson Fire Kills 3

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a three-alarm fire that destroyed three rooming houses in Vancouver's West End, killing at least three persons and sending four to hospital early today.

The fire began about 3:40 a.m. on a porch at 1157 Nelson and spread rapidly to 1165 and 1155 Nelson, a cluster of old houses in the city's high-rise apartment district.

A police arson investigator said one of the first firemen on the scene reported smelling gasoline and oil near the porch, where it is believed the fire started in a couch.

Firemen later recovered the bodies of a man and woman from upstairs rooms at 1155 Nelson. They have not been identified.

After a city bulldozer arrived to dig through the rubble of 1157, which was completely demolished, the body of another man was found. A man unaccounted for in 1157 earlier had been identified as Richard Brandson, 37.

One of the first residents out of 1157, who refused to give his name, said he saw a man running down the street as the fire flared up on the porch.

The resident yelled to wake other occupants and then ran onto the street where he flagged down cab driver Bob Wood.

"There was a man on the lawn by this time with burns," said Wood. "We carried him across the street. He wanted to go back in until he found out his wife was out."

Wood said that in five minutes all three of the three-storey houses "were going to beat hell."

Each of the buildings housed 12 to 15 people.

Police evacuated more than 100 other people from nearby rooming houses and apartment buildings at the height of the blaze.

Those in hospital were identified as: Frank McLaughlin, 49, in fair condition with cuts and burns; Vivian Foster, 65, fair with burns; and John Thompson, 27, in good condition with cuts and burns.

Herbert Dayton, 52, of 1157 Nelson, was released after treatment for burns.

At least 90 firemen, with 11 pieces of equipment tackled the blaze, which was still smouldering three hours later.

One of the first policemen on the scene was Constable K. D. Doern and his partner, who arrived to hear a woman screaming from an upstairs window in one of the houses.

Const. Doern said a neighbor he identified as Les Stork, ran to a fire truck which had just arrived and pulled a ladder off.

"We put it up but it wasn't long enough to reach," said Constable Doern. "So this guy pushed it flat against the wall and held it there with his body while my partner and I climbed up.

"The woman wouldn't jump. She was standing there holding a cat and she wouldn't drop it. Finally she put it down and we got her through the window.

"It was terrible. Her clothes were on fire and her flesh . . . she slipped out of our grasp and fell, but she was okay."

During this time, Doern said, another citizen tried climbing up a drain pipe to get at the woman, but he fell back unable to reach her.

SPENDING BILL PASSED

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government won final approval Tuesday for its $18.4 billion spending program in spite of a series of last-minute Conservative attempts to upset the applecart.

The program, the largest ever by a federal government, emerged unscathed from the Commons shortly before midnight when the traditional bill to endorse government spending plans was given third reading.

The vote ended a day-long Conservative attack on controversial appropriations in the over-all package.

By law, Tuesday was the final opportunity for MPs to complain about the spending estimates. All remaining votes to approve or reject the estimates had to be taken at the end of the day.

The final motion was approved with formal Conservative opposition.

When the bill was introduced, the Conservatives registered token opposition at nearly all stages.

It went through first and second readings on voice votes but the Conservatives forced a total of six recorded votes during clause-by-clause study in committee-of-the-whole.

The margins ranged from 126 to 1 on the first clause to 205 to 4 on committee approval of the bill in total.

B.C. Government Buys 3 Sawmills

In its third venture into the forest industry, the provincial government has bought controlling interest in three sawmills in Vanderhoof.

The purchase of Plateau Mills Ltd. for $7.65 million was announced in a statement Tuesday by Lands and Forests Minister Bob Williams, who last fall vetoed a bid by Rayonnier Canada Ltd. to buy the mills.

Williams said the government bought out the company to ensure Canadian ownership (Rayonnier is American owned), to protect the Mennonite families who set up the company in 1944 and to provide an experimental study operation for the B.C. Forest Service.

"It should be noted that Plateau has been and is a profitable operation and has excellent prospects for the future," the statement said. "The return on investment is expected to be most attractive."

The province has bought "over 90 per cent" of the shares in Plateau, Williams said, and they will be held by B.C. Cellulose Co., the Crown company which also holds the province's shares in Columbia Cellulose Ltd., purchased last April.

Plateau President William Martens was not available for comment today.

The minister said there will be little change in the operation of the company which employs 280 men in the mills and 100 men as contract loggers, and produces about 120 million board feet annually.

Plateau will, however, expand its activities into the Chilko Forest an uncommitted timber area where mill crews along with the B.C. Forest Service will do experimental studies on logging methods, environment problems and cost analysis.

To allow for this program, Prince George district forester Bill Young has been appointed a director of Plateau Mills.

Young's appointment and the Plateau-Chilko program are important Williams said because the forest service has often been unable to develop practical regulations and guidelines for the logging industry because of its limited involvement in actual logging operations.

Martens and George Froese, superintendent of operations at the mills, will continue with the company as directors.

Plateau's accountant Mark Thibodeau will also join the board and a representative of B.C. Cellulose will be appointed later.

GAS FIRM HALTS PRODUCTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., the second largest producer of natural gas in British Columbia, is curtailing its activities in the province until the investment climate improves, the company told the B.C. Energy commission Tuesday.

Henry Boswell, Amoco's vice-president of production and designated to become president in July, told the commission the cutbacks started "particularly since the (provincial) government's announcement of its unreasonable increase in oil royalties."

Cover-Up Only Choice: Dean

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — John Dean testified today that the White House staff felt there simply was "no alternative" but to try to hush up the Watergate bugging, although nobody liked the idea very much.

Returning for a third day at the nationally televised senate hearings on the scandal, Dean said the cover-up began immediately after five men — including a member of President Nixon's campaign staff — were arrested while planting bugs and photographing documents at the Democratic national committee June 17, 1972.

"Who set the policy on the cover-up?" asked Sen. Edward Gurney (Rep.—Fla).

"I don't think the policy was set," Dean replied. "There just was no alternative at that time."

Dean, fired April 30 as White House counsel, conceded again that he never tried to warn the president what the White House staff and campaign officials were doing.

"You must have realized this cover-up business was pretty serious," Gurney said.

"I didn't like it from the outset," Dean replied. "I don't think anybody liked it."

As Gurney pressed for an explanation about why Dean did not talk to the president himself, Dean said he "didn't have access" to Nixon directly but reported to Nixon's two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

"I assumed that what I was reporting to Haldeman and Ehrlichman was being reported to the president," Dean said.

Dean offered to take a lie detector test as he stuck to his televised testimony that the president and his top aides collaborated in the cover-up plot.

He added some new accusations, saying the White House used the FBI and Internal Revenue Service to investigate persons named on an "enemies list." And he said the secret service once spied on Senator George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate.

Officials of the Senate committee said Dean would be asked today a series of questions submitted by Leonard Garment, who replaced Dean as White House counsel. Dean was fired April 30.

"It would appear they would like to prove that Mr. Dean was the brains of it all, and that he gave bad advice," said Senator Daniel Inoye (Dem.—Hawaii).

Hanging Ban Debate Rages

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Commons committee failed to decide Tuesday whether to accept or reject a move by the minority Liberal government to abolish the death penalty in Canada.

Members representing all parties spent nearly two hours arguing whether government-sponsored amendments to the capital punishment bill now before parliament are in order or not.

The two amendments introduced by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand would totally abolish capital punishment but provide for a minimum of 10 years before parole.

A judge, at his discretion, could extend the minimum term to 20 years.

Allmand introduced the amendments at the committee meeting Tuesday through Liberal MP Rod Baker.

Committee Chairman James Jerome will consider the amendments and rule as to their admissibility for debate in the committee Thursday morning.

Earlier in the day Jerome said in an interview that he believed the amendments were out of order.

But, after Tuesday's arguments, he would only state that he has "a completely open mind on the question."

MPs favoring the retention of the death penalty argued that the solicitor-general's proposals were out of order since they violated the principle of the capital punishment bill — already approved in a free vote in the Commons — to extend for another five years abolition of capital punishment for all crimes except the murder or police and prison guards.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Calgary North), a retentionist, accused Allmand of "playing games" by informally proposing his amendments last week.

In the Commons, former prime minister John Diefenbaker first was booed, then interrupted by a back-bench Progressive Conservative colleague as he questioned the government Tuesday on its proposed total ban on capital punishment.

"I've listened enough to the destructive arguments of the honorable member for Prince Albert," said Peter Reilly (PC — Ottawa West).

"I will sit here and yell 'boo' every time he opens his mouth."

Cannery Warning

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis warned Tuesday that if the Japanese take over Cassiar Cannery near Prince Rupert they'll find that their fishboats are no more valuable than second-hand taxis.

Davis announced that he will lower the licence classification of Cassiar fishboats to a 10-year working limit rather than allow foreign nationals to acquire exclusive fishing rights in Canadian waters through the back door.

"There is no way in which foreign nationals are going to get control over the right to fish in Canadian waters," the minister declared, noting that only Canadian citizens can hold valid fishing licences.

The minister reported that Cassiar Cannery has about 100 fishboats on the West Coast, about two per cent of the total number of boats operating there. Even if the company were sold, he explained, only Canadian fishermen could man Cassiar's boats.

"But what we are concerned with here is basic policy," Davis said. "We can see as we become more successful in enlarging our exclusive fishing zones a number of foreign nations are going to try to come in through the back door by buying up Canadian companies."

Conversion Halted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver city council voted 7-4 Tuesday to declare a one-year moratorium on conversion of existing apartments to condominium units that then are offered for sale to tenants.

Mayor Art Phillips and Aldermen Geoff Massey, Fritz Bowers and Mike Harcourt voted against the moratorium, which was approved moments after council had approved stringent regulations for conversions.

These included requirements that 75 per cent of tenants had to approve conversions and that owners had to permit continued renting in hardship cases.

PENSIONERS' MAIL FIRST AT VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Old age pension cheques were given top priority after Vancouver's wildcat post office strikers returned to their jobs in the main post office Tuesday afternoon to sort out today's first deliveries.

"There are thousands of pension cheques in here," David Stutters, of the post office public affairs department, said Tuesday night.

A postal official said earlier Tuesday there were 60,000 pension cheques ready for distribution.

Stutters said the post office might schedule overtime work and take on casual help if necessary to move the piled up mail through into Vancouver homes and business places.

Stutters said after dealing with the pension cheques priority for the other mail would likely be handled in the sequence in which it arrived in the area's postal stations.

'I'M THE QUEEN OF CANADA'

TORONTO (CP) — Queen Elizabeth urged Canadians of all ethnic origins Tuesday to accept her as their monarch and the Crown as a symbol of "national sovereignty belonging to all."

"It is as Queen of Canada that I am here," she told 1,400 prominent Ontarians at a lavish provincial dinner after a heavy day of appearances throughout the hot, muggy provincial capital. It was the second in a 10-day four-province tour.

"I would like the Crown to be seen as a symbol of national sovereignty belonging to all. It is not only a link between Commonwealth nations, but between Canadian citizens of every national origin and ancestry."

One of the longest ovations came after the Queen said:

"The Crown is an idea more than a person and I would like the Crown in Canada to represent everything that is best and most admired in the Canadian ideal.

"I will continue to do my best to make it so during my lifetime and I hope you will continue to give me your help in this task."

The Queen stood, unsmiling, during the long ovation but when she resumed there seemed to be a note of emotion in her voice.

In a brief passage spoken in French, the 47-year-old monarch drew applause when she said that minorities re-discovering their roots in all countries had created conflicts.

"But Canada can be admired for its respect for individual Canadians which raises cultural identity above political debate and makes it a right.

"The only thing it demands is that all have an opportunity to master one or two of the official languages."

The Queen's address provided fitting counterpoint to a program of singing and dancing by 1,500 people of 40 different cultural backgrounds hours before on the football field of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Among the Chaos and Disorder May Be That 'Real Find' for You

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

To meander down the lower reaches of Johnson Street is to come face to face with Victoria's alter ego, the antithesis of "smart" downtown with its department stores and candy shops and tourist gimmicks.

Here is the nether-world of the secondhand shops, weird and wonderful emporiums chock-full of furniture, tools, utensils, ornaments, bric-à-brac of every conceivable (and inconceivable) kind.

Whether it's something mundane you're after, like a wrench or a coffee table, or something exotic like a Bengal tiger skin, this is the place to come.

There are no "door-opening specials" or sales, but chances are you'll be able to pick up a bargain — possibly after some good-natured but determined haggling with the proprietor.

But one doesn't have to buy something to benefit from the experience. As any true junk-shop fanatic knows, more than half the fun of the thing lies in the anticipation; in wondering whether, behind the next rusty bedstead, lies that real "find."

If the second-hand dealer has a flair for his trade — as Joe Slyth undoubtedly has — he is well aware of this quirk and he arranges his wares accordingly. In a state of splendid chaos and disorder.

Joe has been a purveyor of paraphernalia on Johnson for five years. He also dispenses something else — his own brand of Cockney humor and warmth that invariably sends his customers on their way feeling a whole lot better than when they arrived.

Take the signs, for instance. They're dotted about all over the place. One says "We buy junque and sell antiques"; another, "Free today — sympathy while it lasts."

Displayed on one wall, alongside old framed photographs of Joe as a young military musician, is a snapshot of him walking down the street with business-suited briskness, briefcase in hand.

Beneath the picture in the frame is a crumpled dollar bill, and the caption reads

SLYTH
. . . humor and goods

"On my way to the bank — the first dollar, May 1, 1969."

Joe chuckles at the complete inability of some of his customers to grasp the significance of that bill. They tend to think it has some intrinsic value as a collector's item, and when he explains it was the first money he ever earned from his business they walk away, shaking their heads in bewilderment or pity.

Born in London and educated at the same poor kids' school Charlie Chaplin once attended, Joe became a bandsman first with the Gloucesters and later with the Welsh Guards.

In the years following the Second World War it wasn't exactly an onerous job. As Joe recalls: "We'd go to work at 10, have a coffee break at 11 and knock off at noon. What a life . . ."

But one of the Guards' tours abroad took him to Toronto in 1948, to play at the Canadian National Exhibition, and what he saw of the country then left an impression. So six years later, when the Canadian Army was spending thousands of dollars recruiting British servicemen as band personnel, Joe didn't need much persuading.

He played the clarinet for the Canadian Engineers, stationed at Chilliwack, until his retirement in 1966 and bought the Johnson Street business three years later.

He'd never sold anything in his life before, and his only qualification for the job was a liking for old furniture.

Do secondhand store customers fall into any distinct categories?

In Joe's experience it's hard to generalize, although he finds a fair sprinkling of young couples who are furnishing on a tight budget, as well as American tourists.

The fashion and home decorating fads of the young often create a sudden surge of demand. There was the time when Joe sold the full-dress "Chocolate Soldier" outfit of a cadet at Annapolis, the U.S. naval academy, to a long-haired youth.

"He was going to wear it," Joe says in head-shaking disbelief.

Bowlers and old hats of all kinds are a sure-seller, and a new use seems to have been found for that classic receptacle of bygone days, the china chamber pot.

"Seems they don't put it under the bed any more but on the table with flowers in it," Joe observes.

One day the shop bell jangled and "in walked this suit of armor," followed closely by the owner and would-be seller. Joe obliged, stuck a label on the metallic figure christening him "Sir Lancelot" and sold him almost immediately.

Joe admits there are days, especially in the quiet winter months, when he wonders if he's making any living at all. But then come the busy periods when even the stuff that's been lying around a long time gets sold.

Quiet or hectic, he's contented in a job that brings him into daily contact with all kinds of people. Many of them, he believes, are rebels against the chrome-and-plastic age and in search of that almost-lost quality, reliability, which they associate with an earlier era.

Modern furniture looks fine but often the flashy exterior merely masks disillusionment, in the form of cheap ply. Explaining the constant demand for old oak furniture, Joe says: "It's kind of a looking back to something that was dependable."

70-Home Co-Op Plan To Start in October

A 70-unit co-operative housing project is planned for five acres of provincially-owned land in Victoria West.

Construction of the townhouses, at a cost of $1.1 million, by the newly-formed Pioneer Co-operative Housing Association, is expected to begin in October.

Additional one-storey apartments are not included in the present capital budget.

The plan was announced today by John Warren, president of the co-operative, and representatives of the United Church, which has acted as the sponsor of the project putting up an initial $50,000.

The site is an L-shaped parcel of land, a group of vacant lots, bounded by McCaskill, Langford, Hereward Streets and the E and N rail line.

Most of the property is made up of a 4.3-acre parcel of land which the city of Victoria sold to the province in January of this year at a price of $350,000. The city sold the property on the understanding that it would be used as part of the province's land bank for housing.

The province is retaining ownership of the land — which includes some lots which the province bought separately — and is leasing it to the co-operative for a rental of $14,000 a year for 50 years.

Ald. Alf Hood, who was at the site this morning when the project was announced, said the city is pleased and "very interested" in the project.

"As far as we are concerned it must work," Hood said. "This is the first venture into co-operative housing for Victoria and we will follow it with interest because its success will effect the success of future projects of this type."

He noted that the city sold the land to the province on the understanding that the site layout is satisfactory to the city. Municipal services, including underground wiring, will be paid for by the developer, the co-operative.

Hood said he feels the projects is consistent with the over-all plan for Victoria West which he describes as a "very stable, hard core community" where there is much property that can be reclaimed from industry for "fine new housing."

Warren said he would like to see the project "bring this area a new sense of community."

The co-operative is stressing that the project is not "low cost housing" but rather "a community serving a broad income and age range."

Rev. John Wood, who represents the United Church on the board of the co-op, said the church became involved in the project because it recognizes the social need to provide housing at reasonable costs.

Financing beyond the initial contribution of the United Church is being arranged with Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. which is involved in the planning.

Sager and Marshall Associates have been retained as architects of the project.

The co-operative was incorporated in February and now has a membership of 20. Recruitment of new members is in progress.

Unlike a condominium, a whole co-operative housing project is owned by all the members of the co-op who individually lease their home from the co-op. Administration is through an elected board of directors.

Warren estimates that shares will cost in the range of $1,000 to $1,900. Members will pay a monthly rent in addition to this.

During the planning and construction phases, United Housing Foundation, a non-profit Vancouver-based organization, is assisting the Victoria group under a management contract. When the project is completed, management will be handled entirely by the local co-oprative.

She Couldn't Hear Truck

A Victoria girl hit by a truck Tuesday couldn't hear it coming because she was deaf, her father said today.

Seven-year-old Julie Duker is in poor condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital after undergoing surgery for head injuries late Tuesday.

"We don't know exactly what happened because she was alone at the time of the accident and there doesn't seem to be any witnesses," Julie's father, Allan, said.

The truck was driven by Robert Gingrich, 1430 Walnut, police said.

City Hires Its First Full-Time Solicitor

Jacob de Villiers, senior partner in a Victoria law firm, has been named to succeed Terry O'Grady as Victoria's city solicitor, Mayor Peter Pollen announced today.

De Villiers, 44, takes up his duties Sept. 1 and, unlike O'Grady, will be on a full-time salaried basis.

O'Grady is leaving to join the newly-established Insurance Corporation of B.C., the provincial government agency which will handle the public auto insurance scheme.

De Villiers was a member of the Southern Rhodesia Bar from 1956 to 1963 and from 1963 to 1965 he was a member of the Alberta Bar, employed in the provincial attorney-general's office.

He was called to the Bar of B.C. in 1965 and is the senior partner in the Victoria firm of de Villiers, Jones, Emery and Carfra.

Pollen said the city's contract with O'Grady's firm left him free to undertake other legal work in a private capacity, but to meet the present requirements of the city and follow the example of other city corporations it has been decided to appoint an "in-house" solicitor.

De Villiers' appointment was recommended Tuesday by council's committee of the whole and will be ratified at Thursday's full council meeting. Pollen said the salary has yet to be confirmed.

Mayor Wants to Control Self-Serve Gas Stations

Mainly because of safety considerations, Victoria council is becoming concerned at theh "quiet intrusion" of self-service gasoline stations, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen told reporters the oil companies' new policy is a "very retrogressive" one, as council feels attendants should always be on duty at service stations both in the interest of motorists and nearby residents.

The mayor noted that a driver impaired by alcohol could pull up at a self-service station, light up a cigarette while filling his tank and "blow the whole thing to kingdom come."

He said the normal services provided by station attendants — windshield cleaning, oil and tire checks — are also invaluable to the general safety of automobiles.

The subject has been discussed at two meetings of council's Advisory Planning Commission, "with a great deal of differing opinion," and the planning director has been asked to present a report on possible city controls.

Pollen pointed our that present zoning policies do not specifically prohibit or attach restrictions to self-service gas stations.

Two Years for Road Death

A Victoria man was sentenced to two years less a day in prison for criminal negligence which caused the death of another man in a traffic accident June 4.

Donald G. Cole, 20, of 1010 Balmoral, had pleaded guilty June 14 and was sentenced in provincial court today by Judge Harold Alder.

The accident at Quadra and Johnson June 4 took the life of Bruce Jacobsen, 24, of 860 Royal Oak.

A Victoria policeman testified Cole and another man got into a fistfight at 11:22 p.m. June 4. As police approached, Cole got into his car and sped away at 45 m.p.h.

Cole, going north on Quadra, ran a red light and struck Jacobsen's car going east on Johnson. Jacobsen died in hospital two days after the accident.

Cole was also given a two years less a day indeterminate sentence on the criminal charge and a six-month concurrent sentence for breach of probation.

He had pleaded guilty June 14 to driving while under suspension at the time of the accident and to Kamloops RCMP charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

He was sentenced to a total of 30 days in jail for those offences.

Saanich Must Pay Contractor

An appeal against an arbitration award of $58,608, to be paid by Saanich to a local contractor, has been dismissed by B.C. Supreme Court.

Wheaton Construction Ltd. was contracted by Saanich in November, 1970, to build 3,500 feet of sewer on Glanford, west of Douglas, for $66,118.

Saanich had specified that firm grey clay was the prevalent soil throughout the pipeline route but Wheaton encountered a soft blue clay.

Wheaton completed the work and claimed $118,000 more for the extra work alleging the job specifications were misleading.

An arbitration, as provided for in the contract, found unanimously in Wheaton's favor and awarded $58,608 damages.

Saanich, represented by Louis Lindholm, asked Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane to set aside the arbitration award May 29.

Lindholm said the attack on the arbitration was based on the contention that the board had no jurisdiction, or that it exceeded its jurisdiction because it did not answer questions put forward by the parties.

"The arbitration clause in the contract constituted a 'written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration'," said Macfarlane.

"The parties formally submitted their dispute to arbitration when they appointed the members of the board . . . The board was, in my opinion, then clothed with jurisdiction to settle the dispute or difference which had arisen," he said.

Macfarlane ruled it was unnecessary for "specific questions to be agreed upon before a valid submission was before the board."

"The arbitration clause is in general terms, and there is no provision for questions to be formulated as a condition precedent to jurisdiction," he said.

Tons of Knots Discharged Daily by Mill

Raynier's pulp mill at Port Alice discharges about 10 tons of wood knots a day into Neurotsos Inlet, the Pollution Control Board was told today.

But the mill on northern Vancouver Island will introduce a screening operation later this year which will salvage the knots for processing at another mill, manager Ralph James said.

The process used at the Port Alice mill cannot digest the knots. At kraft pulp mills, knots are utilized with the rest of the wood.

James was testifying at the second day of a hearing before the board at the Victoria Law Courts. Rayonier is appealing pollution control standards for the Port Alice mill recently set by William Venables, the province's director of pollution control.

Venables had ordered the mill to immediately meet higher water standards in the inlet where effluent is discharged.

He has also instructed the company to add a recovery system by the end of 1975. Rayonier said Tuesday it would do so — at a cost of $32.5 million — but it would need six to nine months more time.

The company is also arguing for postponement of the water quality standards until the addition is in. It also claims stiffer control standards that Venables has set for 1978 are not necessary.

Louis Lindholm counsel for Venables, quoted today a 1970 inquiry which said the demands on oxygen in the inlet's water made by the mill's effluent are equivalent to the demands which would be made by sewage from a city of 3.5 million.

The basic question raised by Rayonier's witnesses Tuesday is: how relevant is the economic importance of the Port Alice mill to the problem of controlling its pollution?

Lindholm said Venables could not have regard for the economic and social aspects in enforcing the Pollution Control Act.

But Charles Locke, counsel for Rayonier, said setting controls for the mill could not be considered in the abstract.

"How you are able to divorce pollution control from social and economic factors escapes me."

Lindholm replied that pollution control legislation says, in effect, there comes a time when economic aspects must give way to environmental aspects and at the Port Alice mill, that time has arrived.

The board recognizes there is a "gray area" said chairman Valter Raudsepp, ruling that the board would hear Rayonier's evidence on economic impact. But more than once during the afternoon he suggested to Locke that Rayonier try to keep testimony closer to the issue.

Among witnesses called by the company were businessmen, the doctor at Port Alice, a geographer and an economist.

Dr. D. L. Morris said he regularly swims in the chilly Neuroutsos Inlet, where the mill is located, although he doesn't know anyone else who does.

While the mill discharge discolors the water through about eight miles in the inlet and winds produce foamy patches, Morris said marine life is abundant and fish can be caught near the mill outfall two miles from the top of the inlet.

Many salmon moved up the inlet last August and he has seen numerous fingerlings around the wharf in the past month. He knows of no one who has been made ill by eating the fish, he said.

Dr. E. M. W. Gibson of West Vancouver, a geography professor at Simon Fraser University, and F. L. C. Reed, a consulting economist from Vancouver, were both called by Rayonier to testify on the economic importance of the mill to the north island.

Reed said his study of the question suggests each job at the mill generates two more jobs elsewhere.

Raudsepp noted that neither Gibson nor Reed had been asked by Rayonier to examine the hidden social costs which follow a change in environmental factors.

The hearing adjourns later today until Friday and if not concluded then will continue next Wednesday.

and South Vietnamese troops.

The ICCS team was approaching Song Dinh, 100 miles east of Saigon, when preceding South Vietnamese troops ran into a Viet Cong band Tuesday.

None of the ICCS members was injured as the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong exchanged gunfire. One mortar shell landed about 200 feet from the ICCS team.

The two Canadians were identified here as Capt. Alex Miller of Montreal and Capt. A. R. Robertson of Grande Prairie, Alta.

The South Vietnamese government today before it was announced that Nixon had vetoed the appropriations bill said it would consider military support to the Cambodian government if a bombing halt creates a situation threatening South Vietnam's security.

The constable described Stork, who held the ladder, as "a hero — an incredible guy."

Fred Roeske, 46, the owner of 1155, said he was awakened by cries of fire in the street.

As soon as he realized it was the house next door he sent his wife out and ran upstairs knocking on doors to wake tenants.

"Then I went back down and threw some of our things out.

"By this time there were flames leaping from the house next door right through our window," said Roeske.

"The house was up in flames in no time — I just don't know how many got out."

Nude Clubs Seen Target Of Crackdown

A Liquor Control Board crackdown requiring that a three-piece orchestra accompany cabaret entertainment at all times has raised the ire of at least one cabaret entrepenuer.

Bob Reeds, a shareholder of The Barn Ltd., Vancouver, trekked over to Victoria this morning armed with a protest placard and an open letter to complain about the ruling.

He said it was an attempt to shaft nude clubs. "My protest is based on the attempt by the board to get rid of nude dancing by pricing it out of existence," he said.

The Barn, he explained, offered an artistic nude show. "There's no bumps and grinds. Our girls (directed by a nude MC) simply walk out on stage, take their clothes off and dance."

Besides the added cost of continuous orchestral accompaniment, Reeds finds fault with the ruling because it will destroy the atmosphere of the show. "Men that come in for lunch want soothing music," he said, "not an orchestra."

The ruling by LCB executive assistant V. C. Woodland said all cabaret owners would receive regulations, to be implemented whether cabaret entertainment was a nude dancer, ventriloquist, poet or mimic, Reeds said.

Previously the practice at most cabarets, according to Canadian Restaurant Association chairman Don Bellamy, has been to use live orchestras intermittently during hours of operation.

He said a three-piece orchestra costs a minimum of $30 an hour and owners couldn't afford the extra $270 a day to comply with the directive.

Reeds said he is the only cabaret owner to stage a protest, although others in the group of 120 owners on the Lower Mainland are staging "secret indignation meetings."

"It's a matter of principle. Because of the ruling we've had to add $1 to all luncheon prices."

Reeds said inspectors visited The Barn Monday and told management to conform to the orchestral regulations by Tuesday. "But I was given no written confirmation of the ruling."

Cabarets are granted dining lounge licences by the board and allowed to operate until 2 a.m.

Lansdowne Awards

Danny Williams, a Grade 10 student at Lansdowne Junior Secondary School, has received the school's highest award, the W. D. Reid Trophy. The trophy is awarded for superior leadership, excellent citizenship and a good academic standing.

Williams also received the academic award for Grade 10. The academic award for Grade 9 was shared by Tracey Hooper and Joan Carruthers. Gisela Wohlgemuth received the award for top Grade 8 student.

The Saanich Diamond Jubilee Award for outstanding service to the school went to Marion Blouw. The Oak Bay Kiwanis Award for an outstanding school citizen was won by Maria Lopetrone.

Top male athlete was Gordie Crawford and top female athlete Leslie Godfrey.

Gun Wound Victim Flown To Hospital

A Comox man with a bullet in the left side of his chest was flown to Royal Jubilee Hospital early this morning for emergency surgery.

Courtenay RCMP said Cecil Grose was alone in his home at 1:45 a.m. today when the accident occurred.

The man was first taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Comox, but was then taken by a Rescue Co-ordination Centre mercy flight to Victoria at 5 a.m.

RCMP said no further details are available as they have not yet talked to Grose.

In another mercy flight today, a rescue helicopter delivered three pints of blood to the passenger-freighter Oriental Carnival 100 miles off the Vancouver Island west coast.

The ship's doctor radioed ashore that a passenger bleeding internally could not safely be moved because of loss of blood.

Demand for Forest Products Keeps B.C. Economy Growing

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

British Columbia's economy continued its strong growth pattern throughout the first quarter of this year, according to statistics released today by Gary Lauk, minister of industrial development, trade and commerce.

Paced by a continuing demand for forest products, factory shipments totalled $1,356.4 million in the first quarter, an increase of 23.7 per cent over the first quarter of 1972.

March shipments totalled $492.1 million, up from $411 million last March. In February the shipments were worth $443.8 million, up from $357.5 million and in January $420.5 million, up from $330 million.

Manufacture of lumber was up 11.5 per cent, pulp production was ahead 13.5 per cent and paper production up 7.5 per cent.

Most of the forestry production is exported.

The value of exports through B.C. ports was up 24.1 per cent in the first quarter while imports were 18 per cent higher.

Coal and copper production were also up sharply during the first quarter.

In the first three months, B.C. produced 1.9 million tons of coal, up 47.1 per cent over the same period in 1972.

Meanwhile, copper shipments were up 98.6 per cent to 88 million pounds, although statistics have only been obtained for the first two months of the year.

Building permits in British Columbia in the first quarter totalled $238.2 million, up 27 per cent. Housing starts were down 18.9 per cent at 4,005 but completions were up 19.3 per cent at 6,495.

Units still under construction at the end of March totalled 17,292, up from 16,247 units at the end of March, 1972.

Building permits reflect the value of all construction started in organized areas except for pipelines, hydro-electric developments and highways.

In the first quarter, the value of Vancouver Island building permits was $40.2 million, up 15.1 per cent over the first quarter of 1972.

Building permits on the lower mainland including Vancouver totalled $148.7 million, up 29.4 per cent.

Other areas of growth included Okanagan, $20.4 million, up 35.5 per cent; southern interior, $11.7 million, up 23.7 per cent, and the central interior, $9.7 million, up 49.2 per cent.

Declines were experienced in the east Kootenays at $1.8 million, down 10.6 per cent, and west Kootenays at $1.7 million, down 6.1 per cent.

Retail sales were up 15.5 per cent in the first quarter while bank debits rose 22.1 per cent and gasoline consumption increased 10 per cent.

. . . WATERGATE

At Tuesday's session, Senator Joseph Montoya (Dem.—N. Mex.) asked Dean if Nixon told the truth April 17 when he said "I condemn any attempts to cover up in this case, no matter who is involved."

"No, sir," Dean said. "By that time he knew the full implications of the case."

Dean reiterated that Nixon knew a cover-up was going on as early as last Sept. 15. Dean said that on March 21 he told Nixon specifically that Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Dean himself could be indicted for obstruction of justice because of the cover-up. This was more than three weeks before Nixon's April 17 remark.

White House spokesmen repeated Tuesday that the president stands behind earlier statements denying knowledge or complicity in the Watergate affair. The White House had announced it would have no comment this week on Dean's testimony.

Dean told the Watergate committee today that a White House list of political "enemies" included journalists, businessmen and at least one labor leader, The Washington Star-News, meanwhile, reported that the list also included at least nine U.S. senators, two house members and several entertainers and educators.

Mentioned by the Star-News in document Dean turned over to the committee were Harold J. Gibbons, a vice-president of the Teamsters union regarding "discrepancies" in an income tax return he filed; Robert Strauss, then Democratic party treasurer and now national chairman; television newsmen Chat Huntley and Daniel Schorr; actress Jane Fonda and actors Paul Newman and Gregory Peck; Harvard economist J. Kenneth Galbraith, and Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a former advisor to President John F. Kennedy.

Democratic senators included George McGovern, Edward Kennedy, J. William Fullbright and Edmund Muskie while former Alabama governor George Wallace and New York mayor John Lindsay were also named in the Star-News report.

Meanwhile, Frederick C. LaRue, a top Nixon campaign official, unexpectedly pleaded guilty today to conspiring to obstruct justice in the Watergate case and declared his willingness to be a government witness against others indicted in the future.

LaRue, assistant to former attorney-general John Mitchell on the committee for the re-election of the president, acknowledged helping concoct false stories to mislead investigators and of channeling more than $300,000 to buy the silence of seven men convicted in the break-in at Democratic national headquarters.

LaRue waived formal indictment by a grand jury and entered his guilty plea.

By Thursday morning the cooler moist air will have spread to all areas of B.C. Skies will be cloudy with showers scattered throughout the province and thunderstorms likely in the interior. Afternoon temperatures will be much cooler, especially in the Cariboo district.

CREDIT DATA CURBS SET

Legislation to curb the information-gathering techniques of insurance and credit companies will be introduced later this year, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Companies should be prevented from gaining information on creditors through conversations with neighbors and friends, the minister said, and files on individuals kept by companies should be open to persons involved.

Electronic snooping should be prohibited, he said, except where authorized by the attorney-general and a judge.

Measures to enforce these tougher regulations will come through changes to the B.C. Privacy Act, but Macdonald said he will wait to see the contents of the federal Protection of Privacy Act, now before the Commons, before introducing any provincial legislation.

Strachan Mum On E&N Plan

Transportation Minister Robert Strachan said Tuesday the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway must remain part of the Vancouver Island transportation system.

But the minister would not say whether the provincial government would consider taking over the railway.

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife announced earlier this month he would urge the provincial government to take over the E and N and add it to the B.C. Railway.

Quaife's statement came after an announcement that Canadian Pacific Railway had applied to close stations in Parksville, Nanaimo and Chemainus.

Strachan said he hadn't met Quaife or any of the other Island mayors who were protesting the possible closures and no meetings were planned as yet.

"We're certainly going to take a look into the part the E and N must play in communications on Vancouver Island," Strachan said, adding that the decision to permit the closures is under federal control through the board of transport commission.

The railway will be used more extensively in the future, the minister said, because of the rising population on the Island and the increase in the cost of operating automobiles.

Strachan, who just returned from a month-long trip to Ottawa and London, said he didn't know what specific action would be taken concerning the railway but added "the whole operation requires a good examination."

NEW RAPE TRIAL ORDERED

The B.C. Court of Appeals has ordered a new trial for a Colwood man charged in connection with the rape of a registered nurse.

George Jerome Makow, 22, was convicted Jan. 17 and had been serving an 18-month sentence at the Lower Mainland Correctional Centre in New Haven since being sentenced in Victoria by Mr. Justice William McIntyre.

The appeals Court sitting in Vancouver allowed Makow's appeal by a two-to-one decision.

The court ordered a new B.C. Supreme Court trial, which Makow's lawyer, Harold Turnham, said today will probably be held in the fall.

Turnham is going to Vancouver Thursday to apply for Makow's release from prison pending the new trial.

The appeal court's ruling was based on the fact that "the trial judge had improperly interfered with the cross-examination of the complainant as to conversations alleged to have taken place during intercourse," said Turnham.

Makow had been convicted by a jury of three women and nine men of raping the Saanich woman in the wooded Highland district Nov. 17.

The jury had recommended leniency.

$6M SCHEME GOING TO VOTERS

A new capital works program worth about $6 million will be put to Saanich voters in November.

A closed meeting of council Tuesday reportedly agreed on the general figure but no specifics.

A municipal official said no approximate figure charged to the average ratepayer on such a program could be named. Further details would be available as the program developed, he said.

Expenditures considered likely are recreation facilities for Burnside-Acorn school, a second ice surface and improvements on Colquitz and Swan creeks. A six-year program ended this year which financed an arena, swimming pool, community centres and water works.

Sewing Program For Foster, Single Parents

A program of sewing instruction for foster and single parents will be offered for five Tuesday nights at Central Junior Secondary School starting July 10.

Sewing instructor Olive Minnings will show parents how to sew for their children, while Russ Steel amuses children over six years old by teaching handicrafts and games.

The two-hour programs start at 7:30 p.m. and parents with children under six may get financial assistance to help pay babysitters by phoning Bernice Packford at Family and Children's Service.

The service, along with the Foster Parents Association and Parents Without Partners, is sponsoring the program.

New Sweep In Comox

COURTENAY — The Comox Valley Exhibition Grounds, where two live mortar bombs have been found in the last two months, will be swept for more explosives by about 40 army engineers starting July 4.

A survey crew from Edmonton, Alta., airborne division checked the 100-acre site Tuesday.

The grounds were closed off last week following discovery of the second live bomb by a plowman. An earlier bomb was considered a freak discovery.

$8,000 Pay Hike For Longmore

A. J. Longmore will get an $8,000 raise July 1 when he ceases to be a civil servant and becomes an employee of the Greater Victoria School Board.

Longmore will be paid $33,000 a year by the board as its first superintendent of schools.

He is paid $24,678 as district superintendent, a job involving the same duties as his new one.

This salary has been paid by the provincial education department, along with an administrative allowance paid by the board.

The pay hike is "recognition of a grossly unfair situation," school board chairman Peter Bunn said today.

Greater Victoria's district superintendent and those in four other districts have been underpaid for years, said Bunn.

The school trustees have wanted to make superintendents in these five districts school board employees and give them better salaries, but the Social Credit government always refused, he said.

"They will never catch up what they have already lost" in salary increases, said Bunn.

"Longmore is not a money-grubbing individual at all," he said, and added that the board's decision on Longmore's new salary was unanimous.

"We have a very high opinion and respect for this guy."

CHANGE OF DIAPERS FOR HITCHHIKERS?

Three Duncan youths joined the throngs of hitchhikers near Victoria Tuesday afternoon, but they were no ordinary hitchhikers—the oldest was only eight.

The boys were picked up by Saanich police on the Trans-Canada Highway near Burnside Road at 1:45 p.m. and said they were on their way to visit friends.

"All we can do with kids this young is try to get hold of their parents and ask them to come down and pick them up," a police spokesman said.

"We get this kind of thing quite a lot when it's nice out and school is almost over."

Blanshard Link Viewed As Threat to Library

The long-delayed extension of Blanshard Street will improve traffic flow but it could also upset the work of the Saanich-Victoria branch library.

Donald Miller, director of the Greater Victoria Lobrary, told a library board meeting Tuesday that one possible route along Seymour Ave. to the Patricia Pay Highway would cut close enough to "hinder the operation of the library."

Problems of access from a four-lane highway and noise levels of traffic "would nake it virtually impossible to operate in my estimation," Miller said.

He read a letter from Highways Minister Graham Lea which said he was not able to give any information on the route but would let the board know as soon as possible.

"They're looking for the cheapest route," Miller said. "I understand another possible route would bring traffic within a few feet of Saanich municipal hall."

The extension joining Blanshard to Pat Bay Highway continues to be discussed privately by Saancih and the highways department.

Drainage problems at the branch library also figured in the director's monthly report.

Miller said no work has started to correct the drainage problem at the library nor have there been any repairs to the damaged floor tiles and walls in the auditorium area.

The area still has an unpleasant musty odor, he said, and is unusable for meetings and most programs.

Miller said the drainage problem was caused by a sewer line and surface drainage and Saanich municipality, which owns the building, is expected to make it right.

The board moved to send a strong letter to Saanich asking to have the situation remedied.

Gov't Buys School Pupils Displaced

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Parents here are upset about a decision to sell a school to the provincial government, forcing pupil transfers in September and relocation of a children's day care centre.

Chuck Maclean, school board chairman, says the school in the downtown section of this city, 45 miles southwest of Edmonton, will be sold because enrolment has been steadily declining. The $380,000 from the sale will pay most of the cost of a school in a new area and the old building will be used by the Agricultural Development Corp.

Maclean said the board felt it could accommodate the students at other schools although some pupils might have to walk one mile.

The school board wants to use three classes in a cottage school which has been rented for the last five years by a day care centre.

Diana Smith, spokesman for the centre, said 41 children will be displaced and there is no other building which would meet provincial day care standards.

Maclean said the board was trying to set up a meeting between all parties to explore alternatives to the relocation plans.

Long Strike Seen

EDMONTON (CP) — The 16-day strike by 1,030 service workers at the Royal Alexandra Hospital could last up to another eight weeks a union spokesman said Tuesday.

Ian Downie, national representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the strike is no longer the "hospital against union," but now has become "all hospitals against the union."

Downie charged that the refusal of the hospital board to make a new offer is the result of other hospitals telling the Royal Alexandra to use the strike "to show the rest of the hospital workers in the province what will happen" if they make demands similar to those by the striking workers.

Urge Leader Review

CALGARY (CP) — Social Credit MLA Albert Ludwig Tuesday called for a complete review of the party leadership and a caucus of MLAs to decide whether a leadership convention should be held.

Ludwig's statement came one day after party leader Werner Schimdt finished second to Progressive Conservative Stewart McCrae in the Calgary Foothills byelection. Schmidt, who narrowly won the party leadership earlier this year, trailing McCrae by 1,484 votes.

Rights 'Threatened'

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — The right of treaty Indians to hunt on crown lands could be endangered if these lands are designated wilderness areas and opened to recreational development, Chief John Snow of the Stoney Indian band said Tuesday.

Chief Snow told land use hearings conducted by the Alberta Environment Conservation Authority he is concerned that the livelihood of his people may be at stake with the development of the eastern slope region of the Rocky Mountains.

TB ON RESERVE MAJOR PROBLEM

CALGARY (CP) — Eighteen cases of active tuberculosis were found among the 1,600 people on the Stoney Indian reserve west of Calgary last year.

Dr. Bill Cochrane, who will assume duties as provincial deputy health minister Aug. 1, told a meeting of the Canadian Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association Tuesday that this indicated a major problem in health care.

His comments came following reports Monday by Dr. Stefan Grzybowski of Vancouver that TB among Canadian Indians and Eskimos was higher than in developing nations.

The figures for the Stoney reserve were considerably higher than the national averages for Canadian Indians given by Dr. Grzybowski, however. The national average of 136 cases for every 100,000 Indians would mean there should have been two cases on the Stoney reserve.

Dr. Cochrane, former dean of medicine at the University of Calgary, said the increase on the reserve probably could be attributed to the fact that the university had arranged for a doctor to live there last year.

The activities of this doctor in finding cases on the reserve may indicate, however, that the problem of TB among Canadian Indians may be worse than expected.

Face-to-Face Justice

CAIRO — The courts convicted him of killing his wife and sent him to prison for life. Ten years later another prisoner stepped into his cell and confessed to the murder. The confession, reported Tuesday by Al Ahram newspaper, happened at Torah Prison near Cairo. Prison officials confirmed Al Ahram's account, which said:

An agronomist, Azmy Abdel Tawab Marei, was convicted of embezzlement and was sent to the prison to serve his eight-year sentence. In his cell he came face-to-face with another convict, 55-year-old Hafez Ghoneim, whom he recognized as the husband of the woman he said he killed. Marei collapsed and confessed to a prison officer.

LONDON — An audience at the Talk of the Town nightclub gave Pearl Bailey a standing ovation and showered her with roses Tuesday night in the finale of her act. It was Miss Bailey's second performance since checking herself out of a London hospital Sunday where she had been admitted for fatigue.

NEW YORK — Actress Debbie Reynolds has been cleared of charges of illegal possession of a gun which was accidentally fired by her 15-year-old son last April, injuring him in the leg.

TOPEKA, Kan. — Dr. John Nichols says he has been trying for 18 years to get the American Medical Association to take his name out of its directory. He now has sued the AMA for $132,500. Nichols contends he has spent 650 hours in the last six years handling trash mail which he says he received as the result of being listed in the association's directory. At $50 an hour, he figures the AMA owes him $32,500. He also asked for a $100,000 penalty, plus court costs and lawyers' fees.

TEL AVIV — Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan and his long-time companion, Rahel Korem, were married Tuesday in a private ceremony at the suburban home of chief army rabbi Mordechai Piron.

LOS ANGELES — A federal grand jury has indicted former major league baseball player Gerry Priddy in connection with a $250,000 bomb extortion attempt involving the cruise ship Island Princess earlier this month. Priddy, 53, of North Hollywood, played for the Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees. He was indicted Monday on a count of "interference with commerce by threats of violence."

Among the Chaos and Disorder May Be That 'Real Find' for You

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

To meander down the lower reaches of Johnson Street is to come face to face with Victoria's alter ego, the antithesis of "smart" downtown with its department stores and candy shops and tourist gimmicks.

Here is the nether-world of the secondhand shops, weird and wonderful emporiums chock-full of furniture, tools, utensils, ornaments, bric-a-brac of every conceivable (and inconceivable) kind.

Whether it's something mundane you're after, like a wrench or a coffee table, or something exotic like a Bengal tiger skin, this is the place to come.

There are no "door-opening specials" or sales, but chances are you'll be able to pick up a bargain — possibly after some good-natured but determined haggling with the proprietor.

But one doesn't have to buy something to benefit from the experience. As any true junk-shop fanatic knows, more than half the fun of the thing lies in the anticipation; in wondering whether, behind the next rusty bedstead, lies that real "find."

If the second-hand dealer has a flair for his trade — as Joe Slyth undoubtedly has — he is well aware of this quirk and he arranges his wares accordingly. In a state of splendid chaos and disorder.

Joe has been a purveyor of paraphernalia on Johnson for five years. He also dispenses something else — his own brand of Cockney humor and warmth that invariably sends his customers on their way feeling a whole lot better than when they arrived.

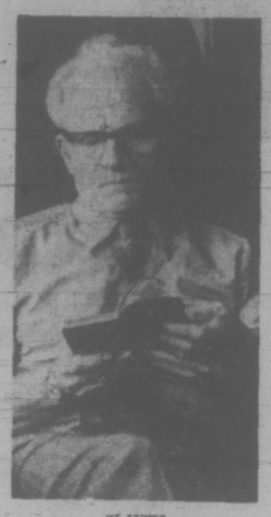
Take the signs, for instance. They're dotted about all over the place. One says "We buy junque and sell antiques"; another, "Free today — sympathy while it lasts."

Displayed on one wall, alongside old framed photographs of Joe as a young military musician, is a snapshot of him walking down the street with business-suited briskness, briefcase in hand.

Beneath the picture in the frame is a crumpled dollar bill, and the caption reads



SLYTH
. . . humor and goods

"On my way to the bank — the first dollar, May 1, 1969."

Joe chuckles at the complete inability of some of his customers to grasp the significance of that bill. They tend to think it has some intrinsic value as a collector's item, and when he explains it was the first money he ever earned from his business they walk away, shaking their heads in bewilderment or pity.

Born in London and educated at the same poor kids' school Charlie Chaplin once attended, Joe became a bandsman first with the Gloucesters and later with the Welsh Guards.

In the years following the Second World War it wasn't exactly an onerous job. As Joe recalls: "We'd go to work at 10, have a coffee break at 11 and knock off at noon. What a life . . ."

But one of the Guards' tours abroad took him to Toronto in 1948, to play at the Canadian National Exhibition, and what he saw of the country then left an impression. So six years later, when the Canadian Army was spending thousands of dollars recruiting British servicemen as band personnel, Joe didn't need much persuading.

He played the clarinet for the Canadian Engineers, stationed at Chilliwack, until his retirement in 1966 and bought the Johnson Street business three years later.

He'd never sold anything in his life before, and his only qualification for the job was a liking for old furniture.

Do secondhand store customers fall into any distinct categories?

In Joe's experience it's hard to generalize, although he finds a fair sprinkling of young couples who are furnishing on a tight budget, as well as American tourists.

The fashion and home decorating fads of the young often create a sudden surge of demand. There was the time when Joe sold the full-dress "Chocolate Soldier" outfit of a cadet at Annapolis, the U.S. naval academy, to a long-haired youth.

"He was going to wear it," Joe says in head-shaking disbelief.

Bowlers and old hats of all kinds are a sure-seller, and a new use seems to have been found for that classic receptacle of bygone days, the china chamber pot.

"Seems they don't put it under the bed any more but on the table with flowers in it," Joe observes.

One day the shop bell jangled and "in walked this suit of armor," followed closely by the owner and would-be seller. Joe obliged, stuck a label on the metallic figure christening him "Sir Lancelot" and sold him almost immediately.

Joe admits there are days, especially in the quiet winter months, when he wonders if he's making any living at all. But then come the busy periods when even the stuff that's been lying around a long time gets sold.

Quiet or hectic, he's contented in a job that brings him into daily contact with all kinds of people. Many of them, he believes, are rebels against the chrome-and-plastic age and in search of that almost-lost quality, reliability, which they associate with an earlier era.

Modern furniture looks fine but often the flashy exterior merely masks disillusionment, in the form of cheap ply. Explaining the constant demand for old oak furniture, Joe says: "It's kind of a looking back to something that was dependable."

70-Home Co-Op Plan To Start in October

A 70-unit co-operative housing project is planned for five acres of provincially-owned land in Victoria West.

Construction of the townhouses, at a cost of $1.1 million, by the newly-formed Pioneer Co-operative Housing Association, is expected to begin in October.

Additional one-storey apartments are not included in the present capital budget.

The plan was announced today by John Warren, president of the co-operative, and representatives of the United Church, which has acted as the sponsor of the project putting up an initial $50,000.

The site is an L-shaped parcel of land, a group of vacant lots, bounded by McCaskill, Langford, Hereward Streets and the E and N rail line.

Most of the property is made up of a 4.3-acre parcel of land which the city of Victoria sold to the province in January of this year at a price of $350,000. The city sold the property on the understanding that it would be used as part of the province's land bank for housing.

The province is retaining ownership of the land — which includes some lots which the province bought separately — and is leasing it to the co-operative for a rental of $14,000 a year for 50 years.

Ald. Alf Hood, who was at the site this morning when the project was announced, said the city is pleased and "very interested" in the project.

"As far as we are concerned it must work," Hood said. "This is the first venture into co-operative housing for Victoria and we will follow it with interest because its success will effect the success of future projects of this type."

He noted that the city sold the land to the province on the understanding that the site layout is satisfactory to the city. Municipal services, including underground wiring, will be paid for by the developer, the co-operative.

Hood said he feels the projects is consistent with the over-all plan for Victoria West which he describes as a "very stable, hard core community" where there is much property that can be reclaimed from industry for "fine new housing."

Warren said he would like to see the project "bring this area a new sense of community."

The co-operative is stressing that the project is not "low cost housing" but rather "a community serving a broad income and age range."

Rev. John Wood, who represents the United Church on the board of the co-op, said the church became involved in the project because it recognizes the social need to provide housing at reasonable costs.

Financing beyond the initial contribution of the United Church is being arranged with Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. which is involved in the planning.

Sager and Marshall Associates have been retained as architects of the project.

The co-operative was incorporated in February and now has a membership of 20. Recruitment of new members is in progress.

Unlike a condominium, a whole co-operative housing project is owned by all the members of the co-op who individually lease their home from the co-op. Administration is through an elected board of directors.

Warren estimates that shares will cost in the range of $1,000 to $1,900. Members will pay a monthly rent in addition to this.

During the planning and construction phases, United Housing Foundation, a non-profit Vancouver-based organization, is assisting the Victoria group under a management contract. When the project is completed, management will be handled entirely by the local co-oprative.

Two Years for Road Death

A Victoria man was sentenced to two years less a day in prison for criminal negligence which caused the death of another man in a traffic accident June 4.

Donald G. Cole, 20, of 1010 Balfmoral, had pleaded guilty June 14 and was sentenced in provincial court today by Judge Harold Alder.

The accident at Quadra and Johnson June 4 took the life of Bruce Jacobsen, 24, of 860 Royal Oak.

A Victoria policeman testified Cole and another man got into a fistfight at 11:22 p.m. June 4. As police approached, Cole got into his car and sped away at 45 m.p.h.

Cole, going north on Quadra, ran a red light and struck Jacobsen's car going east on Johnson. Jacobsen died in hospital two days after the accident.

Cole was also given a two years less a day indeterminate sentence on the criminal charge and a six-month concurrent sentence for breach of probation.

He had pleaded guilty June 14 to driving while under suspension at the time of the accident and to Kamloops RCMP charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

He was sentenced to a total of 30 days in jail for those offences.

She Couldn't Hear Truck

A Victoria girl hit by a truck Tuesday couldn't hear it coming because she was deaf, her father said today.

Seven-year-old Julie Duker is in poor condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital after undergoing surgery for head injuries late Tuesday.

Julie was hit on Cedar Hill Road near her home at 2855 Delatre.

"We don't know exactly what happened because she was alone at the time of the accident and there doesn't seem to be any witnesses," Julie's father, Allan, said.

The truck was driven by Robert Gingrich, 1430 Walnut, police said.

City Hires Its First Full-Time Solicitor

Jacob de Villiers, senior partner in a Victoria law firm, has been named to succeed Terry O'Grady as Victoria's city solicitor, Mayor Peter Pollen announced today.

De Villiers, 44, takes up his duties Sept. 1 and, unlike O'Grady, will be on a full-time salaried basis.

O'Grady is leaving to join the newly-established Insurance Corporation of B.C., the provincial government agency which will handle the public auto insurance scheme.

De Villiers was a member of the Southern Rhodesia Bar from 1956 to 1963 and from 1963 to 1965 he was a member of the Alberta Bar, employed in the provincial attorney-general's office.

He was called to the Bar of B.C. in 1965 and is the senior partner in the Victoria firm of de Villiers, Jones, Emery and Carfra.

Pollen said the city's contract with O'Grady's firm left him free to undertake other legal work in a private capacity, but to meet the present requirements of the city and follow the example of other city corporations it has been decided to appoint an "in-house" solicitor.

De Villiers' appointment was recommended Tuesday by council's committee of the whole and will be ratified at Thursday's full council meeting. Pollen said the salary has yet to be confirmed.

Mayor Wants to Control Self-Serve Gas Stations

Mainly because of safety considerations, Victoria council is becoming concerned at the "quiet intrusion" of self-service gasoline stations, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen told reporters the oil companies' new policy is a "very retrogressive" one, as council feels attendants should always be on duty at service stations both in the interest of motorists and nearby residents.

The mayor noted that a driver impaired by alcohol could pull up at a self-service station, light up a cigarette while filling his tank and "blow the whole thing to kingdom come."

He said the normal services provided by station attendants — windshield cleaning, oil and tire checks — are also invaluable to the general safety of automobiles.

The subject has been discussed at two meetings of council's Advisory Planning Commission, "with a great deal of differing opinion," and the planning director has been asked to present a report on possible city controls.

Pollen pointed out that present zoning policies do not specifically prohibit or attach restrictions to self-service gas stations.

Saanich Must Pay Contractor

An appeal against an arbitration award of $58,608, to be paid by Saanich to a local contractor, has been dismissed by B.C. Supreme Court.

Wheaton Construction Ltd. was contracted by Saanich in November, 1970, to build 3,500 feet of sewer on Glanford, west of Douglas, for $66,118.

Saanich had specified that firm grey clay was the prevalent soil throughout the pipeline route but Wheaton encountered a soft blue clay.

Wheaton completed the work and claimed $118,000 more for the extra work alleging the job specifications were misleading.

An arbitration, as provided for in the contract, found unanimously in Wheaton's favor and awarded $58,608 damages.

Saanich, represented by Louis Lindholm, asked Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane to set aside the arbitration award May 29.

Lindholm said the attack on the arbitration was based on the contention that the board had no jurisdiction, or that it exceeded its jurisdiction because it did not answer questions put forward by the parties.

"The arbitration clause in the contract constituted a 'written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration'," said Macfarlane.

"The parties formally submitted their dispute to arbitration when they appointed the members of the board . . . The board was, in my opinion, then clothed with jurisdiction to settle the dispute or difference which had arisen," he said.

Macfarlane ruled it was unnecessary for "specific questions to be agreed upon before a valid submission was before the board."

"The arbitration clause is in general terms, and there is no provision for questions to be formulated as a condition precedent to jurisdiction," he said.

Bomb Ban Veto

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today vetoed legislation to cut off funds for U.S. bombing of Cambodia, claiming it would "cripple or destroy" chances for a negotiated peace there and would be "a serious blow" to U.S. credibility around the world.

The House of Representatives sustained the veto.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield then retorted that Nixon would be responsible for the federal government grinding to a halt if he persists in the air war.

Nixon rejected a $3.3 billion supplemental appropriations bill containing a provision barring the use of appropriated funds for further military activity "in, over or from the shores of" Laos and Cambodia.

Congress would keep attaching the same amendment to every available bill, Mansfield vowed.

"If he doesn't want to stop the bombing, but wants to stop the government, it's up to him," Mansfield said.

The majority leader said he saw no way out of the constitutional crisis short of a decision by Nixon to end the air war.

Judging from anti-war votes recorded this week, the house does not have the two-thirds majority to override the president, although the Senate probably does.

Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said the legislation reached Nixon's desk Tuesday evening and the president decided upon his veto after conferring by telephone with Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Gerald Ford of Michigan, Republican leader of the House of Representatives.

The veto was decided upon shortly after the legislation cleared the Senate by a vote of 81 to 11.

A more serious test of wills between Congress and the president is expected to emerge this week, when Congress sends Nixon a resolution permitting government agencies to continue to draw appropriated funds after the current fiscal year closes Saturday.

Unless this resolution passes, government agencies will be without funds to operate.

The House already has voted to attach the amendment to this resolution and the Senate was expected to follow and send the measure to the president in a few days.

Vancouver Arson Fire Kills 3

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a three-alarm fire that destroyed three rooming houses in Vancouver's West End, killing at least three persons and sending four to hospital early today.

The fire began about 3:40 a.m. on a porch at 1157 Nelson and spread rapidly to 1165 and 1155 Nelson, a cluster of old houses in the city's high-rise apartment district.

A police arson investigator said one of the first firemen on the scene reported smelling gasoline and oil near the porch, where it is believed the fire started in a couch.

Firemen later recovered the bodies of a man and woman from upstairs rooms at 1155 Nelson. They have not been identified.

After a city bulldozer arrived to dig through the rubble of 1157, which was completely demolished, the body of another man was found. A man unaccounted for in 1157 earlier had been identified as Richard Brandson, 37.

One of the first residents out of 1157, who refused to give his name, said he saw a man running down the street as the fire flared up on the porch.

The resident yelled to wake other occupants and then ran onto the street where he flagged down cab driver Bob Wood.

"There was a man on the lawn by this time with burns," said Wood. "We carried him across the street. He wanted to go back in until he found out his wife was out."

Wood said that in five minutes all three of the three-storey houses "were going to beat hell."

Each of the buildings housed 12 to 15 people.

Police evacuated more than 100 other people from nearby rooming houses and apartment buildings at the height of the blaze.

Those in hospital were identified as: Frank McLaughlin, 49, in fair condition with cuts and burns; Vivian Foster, 65, fair with burns; and John Thompson, 27, in good condition with cuts and burns.

Herbert Dayton, 52, of 1157 Nelson, was released after treatment for burns.

At least 90 firemen, with 11 pieces of equipment tackled the blaze, which was still smouldering three hours later.

One of the first policemen on the scene was Constable K. D. Doern and his partner, who arrived to hear a woman screaming from an upstairs window in one of the houses.

Const. Doern said a neighbor he identified as Les Stork, ran to a fire truck which had just arrived and pulled a ladder off.

"We put it up but it wasn't long enough to reach," said Constable Doern. "So this guy pushed it flat against the wall and held it there with his body while my partner and I climbed up.

"The woman wouldn't jump. She was standing there holding a cat and she wouldn't drop it. Finally she put it down and we got her through the window.

"It was terrible. Her clothes were on fire and her flesh . . . she slipped out of our grasp and fell, but she was okay."

During this time, Doern said, another citizen tried climbing up a drain pipe to get at the woman, but he fell back unable to reach her.

SPENDING BILL PASSES

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government won final approval Tuesday for its $18.4 billion spending program in spite of a series of last-minute Conservative attempts to upset the applecart.

The program, the largest ever by a federal government, emerged unscathed from the Commons shortly before midnight when the traditional bill to endorse government spending plans was given third reading.

The vote ended a day-long Conservative attack on controversial appropriations in the over-all package.

By law, Tuesday was the final opportunity for MPs to complain about the spending estimates. All remaining votes to approve or reject the estimates had to be taken at the end of the day.

The final motion was approved with formal Conservative opposition.

When the bill was introduced, the Conservatives registered token opposition at nearly all stages.

It went through first and second readings on voice votes but the Conservatives forced a total of six recorded votes during clause-by-clause study in committee-of-the-whole.

The margins ranged from 126 to 1 on the first clause to 205 to 4 on committee approval of the bill in total.

B.C. Government Buys 3 Sawmills

In its third venture into the forest industry, the provincial government has bought controlling interest in three sawmills in Vanderhoof.

The purchase of Plateau Mills Ltd. for $7.65 million was announced in a statement Tuesday by Lands and Forests Minister Bob Williams, who last fall vetoed a bid by Rayonnier Canada Ltd. to buy the mills.

Williams said the government bought out the company to ensure Canadian ownership (Rayonnier is American owned), to protect the Mennonite families who set up the company in 1944 and to provide an experimental study operation for the B.C. Forest Service.

"It should be noted that Plateau has been and is a profitable operation and has excellent prospects for the future," the statement said. "The return on investment is expected to be most attractive."

The province has bought "over 90 per cent" of the shares in Plateau, Williams said, and they will be held by B.C. Cellulose Co., the Crown company which also holds the province's shares in Columbia Cellulose Ltd., purchased last April.

Plateau President William Martens was not available for comment today.

The minister said there will be little change in the operation of the company which employs 280 men in the mills and 100 men as contract loggers, and produces about 120 million board feet annually.

Plateau will, however, expand its activities into the Chilko Forest an uncommitted timber area where mill crews along with the B.C. Forest Service will do experimental studies on logging methods, environment problems and cost analysis.

To allow for this program, Prince George district forester Bill Young has been appointed a director of Plateau Mills.

Young's appointment and the Plateau-Chilko program are important Williams said because the forest service has often been unable to develop practical regulations and guidelines for the logging industry because of its limited involvement in actual logging operations.

Martens and George Froese, superintendent of operations at the mills, will continue with the company as directors.

Plateau's accountant Mark Thibodeau will also join the board and a representative of B.C. Cellulose will be appointed later.

GAS FIRM HALTS PRODUCTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., the second largest producer of natural gas in British Columbia, is curtailing its activities in the province until the investment climate improves, the company told the B.C. Energy commission Tuesday.

Henry Boswell, Amoco's vice-president of production and designated to become president in July, told the commission the cutbacks started "particularly since the (provincial) government's announcement of its unreasonable increase in oil royalties."

Hanging Ban Debate Rages

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Commons committee failed to decide Tuesday whether to accept or reject a move by the minority Liberal government to abolish the death penalty in Canada.

Members representing all parties spent nearly two hours arguing whether government-sponsored amendments to the capital punishment bill now before Parliament are in order or not.

The two amendments introduced by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand would totally abolish capital punishment but provide for a minimum of 10 years before parole.

A judge, at his discretion, could extend the minimum term to 20 years.

Allmand introduced the amendments at the committee meeting Tuesday through Liberal MP Rod Baker.

Committee Chairman James Jerome will consider the amendments and rule as to their admissibility for debate in the committee Thursday morning.

Earlier in the day Jerome said in an interview that he believed the amendments were out of order.

But, after Tuesday's arguments, he would only state that he has "a completely open mind on the question."

MPs favoring the retention of the death penalty argued that the solicitor-general's proposals were out of order since they violated the principle of the capital punishment bill — already approved in a free vote in the Commons — to extend for another five years abolition of capital punishment for all crimes except the murder of police and prison guards.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Calgary North), a retentionist, accused Allmand of "playing games" by informally proposing his amendments last week.

In the Commons, former prime minister John Diefenbaker first was booed, then interrupted by a back-bench Progressive Conservative colleague as he questioned the government Tuesday on its proposed total ban on capital punishment.

"I've listened enough to the destructive arguments of the honorable member for Prince Albert," said Peter Reilly (PC — Ottawa West).

"I will sit here and yell 'boo' every time he opens his mouth."

Cover-Up Only Choice: Dean

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — John Dean testified today that the White House staff felt there simply was "no alternative" but to try to hush up the Watergate bugging, although nobody liked the idea very much.

Returning for a third day at the nationally televised senate hearings on the scandal, Dean said the cover-up began immediately after five men — including a member of President Nixon's campaign staff — were arrested while planting bugs and photographing documents at the Democratic national committee June 17, 1972.

"Who set the policy on the cover-up?" asked Sen. Edward Gurney (Rep.—Fla).

"I don't think the policy was set," Dean replied. "There just was no alternative at that time."

Dean, fired April 30 as White House counsel, conceded again that he never tried to warn the president what the White House staff and campaign officials were doing.

"You must have realized this cover-up business was pretty serious," Gurney said.

"I didn't like it from the outset," Dean replied. "I don't think anybody liked it."

As Gurney pressed for an explanation about why Dean did not talk to the president himself, Dean said he "didn't have access" to Nixon directly but reported to Nixon's two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

"I assumed that what I was reporting to Haldeman and Ehrlichman was being reported to the president," Dean said.

Dean offered to take a lie detector test as he stuck to his televised testimony that the president and his top aides collaborated in the cover-up plot.

He added some new accusations, saying the White House used the FBI and Internal Revenue Service to investigate persons named on an "enemies list." And he said the secret service once spied on Senator George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate.

Officials of the Senate committee said Dean would be asked today a series of questions submitted by Leonard Garment, who replaced Dean as White House counsel. Dean was fired April 30.

"It would appear they would like to prove that Mr. Dean was the brains of it all, and that he gave bad advice," said Senator Daniel Inoye (Dem.—Hawaii).

Cannery Warning

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis warned Tuesday that if the Japanese take over Cassiar Cannery near Prince Rupert they'll find that their fishboats are no more valuable than second-hand taxis.

Davis announced that he will lower the licence classification of Cassiar fishboats to a 10-year working limit rather than allow foreign nationals to acquire exclusive fishing rights in Canadian waters through the back door.

"There is no way in which foreign nationals are going to get control over the right to fish in Canadian waters," the minister declared, noting that only Canadian citizens can hold valid fishing licences.

The minister reported that Cassiar Cannery has about 100 fishboats on the West Coast, about two per cent of the total number of boats operating there. Even if the company were sold, he explained, only Canadian fishermen could man Cassiar's boats.

"But what we are concerned with here is basic policy," Davis said. "We can see as we become more successful in enlarging our exclusive fishing zones a number of foreign nations are going to try to come in through the back door by buying up Canadian companies."

PENSIONERS' MAIL FIRST AT VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Old age pension cheques were given top priority after Vancouver's wildcat post office strikers returned to their jobs in the main post office Tuesday afternoon to sort out today's first deliveries.

"There are thousands of pension cheques in here," David Stutters, of the post office public affairs department, said Tuesday night.

A postal official said earlier Tuesday there were 60,000 pension cheques ready for distribution.

Stutters said the post office might schedule overtime work and take on casual help if necessary to move the piled up mail through into Vancouver homes and business places.

Stutters said after dealing with the pension cheques priority for the other mail would likely be handled in the sequence in which it arrived in the area's postal stations.

Conversion Halted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver city council voted 7-4 Tuesday to declare a one-year moratorium on conversion of existing apartments to condominium units that then are offered for sale to tenants.

Mayor Art Phillips and Aldermen Geoff Massey, Fritz Bowers and Mike Harcourt voted against the moratorium, which was approved moments after council had approved stringent regulations for conversions.

These included requirements that 75 per cent of tenants had to approve conversions and that owners had to permit continued renting in hardship cases.

QUEEN URGES ETHNIC UNITY

TORONTO (CP) — Queen Elizabeth urged Canadians of all ethnic origins Tuesday to accept her as their monarch and the Crown as a symbol of "national sovereignty belonging to all."

"It is as Queen of Canada that I am here," she told 1,400 prominent Ontarians at a lavish provincial dinner after a heavy day of appearances throughout the hot, muggy provincial capital. It was the second in a 10-day four-province tour.

"I would like the Crown to be seen as a symbol of national sovereignty belonging to all. It is not only a link between Commonwealth nations, but between Canadian citizens of every national origin and ancestry."

One of the longest ovations came after the Queen said:

"The Crown is an idea more than a person and I would like the Crown in Canada to represent everything that is best and most admired in the Canadian ideal.

"I will continue to do my best to make it so during my lifetime and I hope you will continue to give me your help in this task."

The Queen stood, unsmiling, during the long ovation but when she resumed there seemed to be a note of emotion in her voice.

In a brief passage spoken in French, the 47-year-old monarch drew applause when she said that minorities re-discovering their roots in all countries had created conflicts.

"But Canada can be admired for its respect for individual Canadians which raises cultural identity above political debate and makes it a right.

"The only thing it demands is that all have an opportunity to master one or two of the official languages."

The Queen's address provided fitting counterpoint to a program of singing and dancing by 1,500 people of 40 different cultural backgrounds hours before on the football field of the Canadian National Exhibition.
